HIGHWAY KILLINGS NEAR RECORD

Ike Won't Be Hoodwinked By Stalin

General Wants World Peace, But Honorably

U. S. President-Elect Answers Russia, But Next Move Up To Reds

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect Eisenhower's aides say he is dedicated to achievement of durable world peace with honor but is wary of being hoodwinked by the Russians at any conference with Premier Stalin.

That is the way the general's aides privately are summing up the general's position on Stalin's stated interest in ending the Korean war and his indicated willingness to confer with Eisenhower to ease world tension.

The general reportedly will insist that the new administration know in advance just what Stalin has in mind before thinking seriously about any face-to-face conference with the Soviet leader.

He is understood to feel there must somehow be some convincing demonstration of good faith on the part of Russia as a forerunner of any meeting.

There appears to be no great optimism at the Eisenhower headquarters that such conditions would be met.

THE GENERAL himself expressed his views regarding the situation when he told a news conference last June that he would meet with Stalin if he thought it would help the cause of peace. He said he would "do anything and go anywhere" if he thought it would contribute to world peace, but he also declared he saw no prospect that a meeting with Stalin would solve world problems.

However, the latest Stalin move is not being taken lightly by Eisenhower or his key aides. They realize that in the eyes of the world, Stalin in effect has said: "Let's get together and talk peace."

Whether it's propaganda or not, it put the new administration on the spot. The reply of John Foster Dulles, secretary of state-designate, approved by Eisenhower, challenged the Russians to prove they aren't bluffing.

And the next move, so far as the new administration is concerned, is up to Stalin.

The incoming administration has called on Stalin to set forth any concrete proposals he has.

"He can rest assured they will be seriously and sympathetically received," Dulles said in Washington Friday after a telephone conference with Eisenhower in New York.

Dulles suggested that Stalin outline specific peace proposals to the new administration after Eisenhower takes office Jan. 20.

THE SOVIET premier's latest overture was made in a statement issued by the Russian Embassy in Washington in reply to questions submitted by the New York Times' diplomatic correspondent, James Reston, a Pulitzer Prize winner.

In his statement, Dulles also suggested that any Soviet proposals be submitted to the Eisenhower administration through the usual diplomatic channels or through the United Nations.

Such channels, Dulles added, always are available "for exchanges of views designed to find ways to promote peace and international good will."

That suggestion was regarded generally as a partial test of whether the Stalin statement was in good faith or, on the other hand, another Soviet propaganda move.

Probers Label Lamar Caudle As 'Honorable' But 'Weak'

WASHINGTON (AP)—A House committee today called former Asst. Atty. Gen. T. Lamar Caudle "an honorably motivated" but "weak" government official.

It also termed him "a scapegoat" in being fired in November, 1951, by President Truman for "outside activities."

The labels were applied by a judiciary subcommittee, headed by Reps. Clegg (D-Ky) and Keating (R-NY), which has been investigating the Justice Department.

The committee reported it is convinced the former head of the department's Criminal and Tax Divisions "never sold himself for riches or for power."

But it pointed to his career as

Dixie Seen Showing Power In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP)—Southern state backing of President-elect Eisenhower in the Nov. 4 election should be reflected in his legislative proposals to the new Congress, Sen. Mundt (R-SD) said today.

Mundt predicted the 83rd Congress, which convenes one week from today, will reach its major decisions through "a working combination of Republicans and Southern Democrats."

Although the session will be Republican-controlled, he said, any legislation projected by Eisenhower "must depend upon support of conservative Southern Democrats."

If Mundt is right, and many members of the new Congress agree with him, any broad civil rights measures, like federal anti-discrimination or fair employment practices commission FEPC, would have as tough sledding as under President Truman.

Eisenhower reaped a rich vote harvest last month by carrying Texas, Florida, Virginia and Tennessee in the presidential election. Mundt said this political fact should be reflected in the Eisenhower legislative proposals.

Mundt said a Republican-Democratic coalition will decide such major issues as "the depth of tax reduction, sharp economies in federal spending and the all-important issues regarding federal versus state or local controls, including FEPC, tidelands oil land ownership, health and education programs."

2 Youths Killed In Auto Crash

DANESE, W. Va. (AP)—Two youths were killed near here Friday when their car left U. S. 19 and struck a rock cliff.

State Police identified the dead as Ellis H. Wells, 19, formerly of Danese and now a resident of Sharon Center, O., and Robert E. Thomas, 20, of Danese.

HST Says Strong U. S. Means Peace

Outgoing President Sure His Decisions In Past Have Been OK

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman is getting ready to leave office convinced that a strong America, co-operating with strong and healthy partner nations, can maintain peace with Russia.

He believes his decision to send American troops into Korea under a United Nations mandate may have saved the world from another global war.

That step, he says, was the toughest decision he ever had to make, tougher even than the one to drop atomic bombs on Japanese cities in 1945, because it involved the risk of a third world war.

Truman is proud of his record on foreign affairs and feels that, when the history of his administration is written by future researchers, it will be noted for having kept the world out of war for nearly eight crisis-ridden years.

HE IS PLANNING a nation-wide broadcast sometime in January summing up what he considers the achievements of his administration and charting the course he thinks the nation will follow. It would be an elaboration on his State of the Union message to Congress, to be delivered early in the session opening Jan. 3.

He is proud of the Greek-Turkish aid program, the Marshall Plan and the succeeding steps undertaken by this government to strengthen the economic and military potential of Communist-threatened nations.

These were bold steps, he said, but the decision to enter South Korea when the North Korean Reds invaded it, in his view, was the "toughest" of all.

When he ordered the bombing of Japan, Truman said, he was told it would shorten the war and save the lives of possibly 25,000 Americans and as many Japanese.

In that case, there was no question of the course to take, he said. In Korea, he said, the whole life of the United Nations was involved. It was a question of acting at the possible risk of a third world war.

He said he is convinced that the decision was a right one, and that it halted communism in its efforts to engulf the whole world.

HE BELIEVES it gave hope to free men everywhere that if they band together they can never be conquered, he added.

The President pointed to the big world globe given him in 1945 by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, who will become President Jan. 20.

"During these eight years," Truman said, "we've kept that old globe out of disaster."

And at home, he continued, "we've got an economic situation without equal in the history of the world" with a production rate of $344 billion, a national income of $290 billion and with 63 million persons employed.

Truman now regards the defeat of the Democratic party in November as just one round of a battle over principles that will be carried into future elections.

He has already voiced his support of Adlai E. Stevenson's leadership and of Stephen A. Mitchell, Stevenson's hand-picked Democratic national chairman. Truman feels, although he wouldn't say so in so many words, that Stevenson's defeat for the presidency stemmed primarily from three things:

1. The glamor attached to Republican candidate Eisenhower by virtue of a great war record.

2. The practice of what Truman has called "demagoguery" by Eisenhower during the campaign, particularly Gen. Eisenhower's announcement that he would go to Korea to seek an early and honorable peace. Men close to Truman say he was incensed by the implication in that announcement that Truman wasn't doing all he could to bring peace in Korea.

3. What Truman called at times "McCarthyism" or "character assassination" by Republican Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin and others in their attacks against his administration, particularly the State Department. The President feels that McCarthy's charges led a lot of uninformed people to believe the government was over-ridden by Communist sympathizers and corrupt employees.

Churchill Wants To Be In On Any Ike-Stalin Peace Parley

WASHINGTON (AP)—Britain's Prime Minister Churchill undoubtedly will demand recognition as a full participant in any Eisenhower-Stalin meeting aimed at easing world tension.

American officials who forecast this today made it plain, however, that they see little chance of any such top-level East-West conference unless Russia shows in advance a genuine desire to end the Cold War.

John Foster Dulles, President-elect Eisenhower's secretary of state-designate, emphasized this Friday in calling for "concrete proposals" from Russia before any meeting between Eisenhower and the Soviet premier.

Responsible American diplomats said they believe any such "concrete proposals" in order to be worth following up, would have to indicate plainly that Moscow is prepared to make some concession. A hint that Russia might be willing to end the Korean war on terms acceptable to the West would fall into this category, they said.

EVEN THOUGH an Eisenhower-Stalin meeting at present seems remote, the 78-year-old Churchill nevertheless can be expected to discuss it with Eisenhower when he visits New York early next month.

British Embassy officials said Churchill's talks will be "informal" with no set agenda to be followed. The prime minister's main aim, they said, will be to try to restore the close British-American partnership of World War II.

Churchill's conference with Eisenhower undoubtedly will cover Eisenhower's recent trip to Korea and secret talk afterward with Gen. Douglas MacArthur about means of ending the Korean war.

The impending Eisenhower-Churchill talk is viewed by British officials as a prelude to a full-dress formal meeting between Churchill and key American cabinet officers, probably in May.

Churchill is to be accompanied only by his wife and daughter during the New York stopover. After two or three days of talks at the home of his friend, financier Bernard Baruch, he is to come to the capital for what is described by British officials as a farewell call on President Truman, who goes out of office Jan. 20. After two days here, Churchill is scheduled to fly to Jamaica for two weeks.

In any later meeting with Eisenhower, Churchill can be expected to bring up (1) Britain's desire for "trade not aid" from the United States to help solve its financial problems, (2) British plans for resuming the flow of top-secret atomic energy information now barred by American law, (3) North Atlantic defense arrangements, (4) Far Eastern problems including the continued differences in American-British policy toward Red China and (5) Britain's oft-repeated request to be represented by at least an observer in the American-New Zealand-Australian defense setup in the Pacific.

Four Vacancies On Police Force Possible Shortly After New Year

Circleville administration officials will have a serious problem confronting them shortly after the new year.

Two city policemen have announced their intentions of quitting the force to take on jobs offering more cash and a third man, on leave from the force because of Army service, has indicated he does not plan to return.

Mayor Ed Amey said Saturday Officer Mack Wise has prepared a resignation from the force, effective Jan. 15, in order to accept employment in North American plant, Columbus.

And Officer Charles Smith is considering a post at Lockbourne Air Force Base. Smith is expected to learn within a week whether he will make the change.

DIXIE WATTERS, on leave from the department while serving with the Army, has returned home but is not expected to return to his job on the force.

Watters has indicated he plans to take employment in Chillicothe. In each case, the Mayor said, the plans were made because of higher salaries offered in the prospective jobs. The indicated plans followed a refusal by City Council to grant pay raises to the police force and to the firemen, seemingly connected by a common link.

"The boys like the work and are happy here," Amey said. "They just want more money."

Although Wise's resignation is dated effective Jan. 15, he is expected to begin his new duties Jan. 5 by employing "days off" accumulated during this year on the force. First step by administrators to replenish the supply of men on the force will be to request for a civil service exam in the near future.

But even that, using past experiences as a guide, possibly will not supply enough men to come up to strength.

ACTUALLY, four spots on the force will be open if the three men proceed with their indicated

'Hunting' Tally Is Given By GI

DAYTON (AP)—Pic. Richard Raiff has answered a Dayton newspaper hunting survey with the notation he bagged one "gook." GI slang for a North Korean.

The newspaper received the report Friday from the Dayton soldier, stationed in Korea. Raiff had filled out the game kill questionnaire published in the paper. He said:

"I hunted in no-man's land today and bagged one 'gook' and no rabbits. I spent 14 hours in the field."

The soldier answered the question on whether game was scarce with a "hell, no."

plans, since Council recently approved addition of another man to the city force—a post yet unfilled.

Seeking an eligibility list from which to bolster the number of men on the force promises to be a big job. For instance, the last civil service exam for policemen held here Aug. 18 drew forth only five candidates—and only two of those graded high enough to be eligible.

Although men from throughout Pickaway County are invited to take the exams, they have been reluctant to do so.

So heading the top of the list of things to do for city administrators here in 1953 will be to appoint four men to vacancies on the force.

It Looks Like Chilly Week End For Area

CHICAGO (AP)—It looks like a cold week end for most of the nation, with Western and Midwest areas in for the worst of the wintry weather.

Cold was extended from the Central Rockies eastward to the Atlantic coast today with sub-zero readings in the midcontinent. The colder air moved eastward and lower readings were in prospect for northeastern states tonight.

It was 7 below zero today in Alexandria, Minn.; -6 in Sioux Falls, S. D.; -3 in Duluth, Minn.; Eau Claire, Wis., and Grand Forks, N. D.; and -1 in Russell, Kan. Temperatures ranged from 20 to 30 from Oklahoma eastward to Virginia and in the 40s along the Southern Gulf coast.

Only light snow was reported in parts of the cold belt, with flurries in the Eastern Great Lakes region and Eastern Dakotas.

Snow and rain storms hit Northern California and Southern Oregon sections Friday night, impeding traffic and knocking out power lines. The storm centered between Weed and Mt. Shasta in Northern California, the same area which was isolated by a severe storm earlier this month. Winds up to 70 miles an hour were recorded at Cape Mendocino, in Northern California. Rainfall was heavy in the San Francisco Bay region.

Liberian Vessel Loses Propeller

NEW YORK (AP)—The Coast Guard reported early today that the 7,157-ton freighter Archimede radioed it lost a propeller about 350 miles southwest of the Azores, but was in no immediate trouble.

The message from the ship, of Liberian registry, said the vessel intended to drop anchor and wait for tugboat service.

At Halfway Mark, Holiday Toll Is 336

Total Is Even Better Than War Slaughter; Ohio Still Paces U. S.

By The Associated Press
The nation's traffic death toll raced along at a reckless pace today and appeared headed for an all-time record for a four-day Christmas holiday.

Deaths on the nation's highways, at a little past the halfway mark in the extended holiday week end, reached 336. Nearly 100 other persons lost their lives in various types of accidents, including 43 in fires. No deaths from Christmas tree fires were reported.

The slaughter at home was far in excess of casualties being recorded in the Korean war during the same period.

Yet, Americans shrugged off the staggering figures which they, themselves, were marking up.

There were relatively few aircraft accidents reported. In fact, the Christmas season has yet to produce a single airplane fatality. Yet, should an aircraft accident be reported, Americans habitually would "oh and ah" but would show little concern over the flow of blood resulting from surface travel mishaps.

OHIO CONTINUED to hold the dubious honor of pacing the entire nation. The Buckeye state had recorded 33 highway killings as of Saturday noon. In addition, two persons died in fires and two were struck by trains.

Col. George Mingle of the Ohio Highway Patrol termed the fatalities "highway slaughter." He promised to "hit even harder in an all-out effort to stop these killings."

Col. Mingle said the patrol increased its enforcement facilities 200 per cent since the Christmas week end last year, when 12 persons died on Ohio highways. A total of 29 accidental deaths were reported last year, with fire claiming 13 lives.

The weather bureau forecast indicated continued cold weather with scattered snow flurries over most of the state. No heavy snow was in sight for the state.

The National Safety Council, expressing concern at the high accident rate, urged motorists to use "common sense, courtesy and a practical application of the Christmas spirit." It warned of the "biggest, ugliest traffic death toll ever piled up on any holiday in the history of our country."

The record slaughter on the highways was during the four-day Christmas holiday of 1936 when 555 persons were killed in motor accidents. Last year's Christmas holiday recorded the nation's highest accidental death toll, a staggering 789, including 535 traffic fatalities.

THE COUNCIL had estimated 590 deaths in traffic accidents for this year's four-day holiday.

The council said indications were that the estimate now appears conservative unless there is a sharp falling off in deaths today and Sunday.

Major factors for the current high accident toll, they said, included driving under the influence of alcohol, deceptive driving conditions and lack of common sense and courtesy.

The nation's traffic toll in the first 11 months this year averaged 102 every 24 hours. However, this figure included deaths resulting from injuries long after the accidents in which the victims were injured. The holiday survey covers only deaths within the period and the figures are not properly comparable.

13 Boys Placed On Probation

ELYRIA (AP)—Thirteen Lorain boys, aged 18 to 20, were put on indefinite probation Friday after they pleaded guilty to contributing to the delinquency of five teen-aged girls during wild parties last summer.

The girls, who admitted sexual intimacy and drinking with the youths during house and beach parties in Lorain and Vermilion, were put on probation several weeks ago. Judge W. E. Kellogg, Medina County common pleas judge assigned to the juvenile court for the case, imposed 60-day jail sentences on the 13 boys, but suspended the sentences pending their good behavior during probation.

Guest Minister Due Sunday In Pilgrim Church

Due to the absence of the Rev. Alonzo Hill on a mercy flight to visit his son in Gibraltar, the Rev. Robert Weaver of First Methodist church will present worship services at 7:30 p. m. Sunday in Pilgrim Holiness church.

The Rev. Mr. Hill left last week on an airplane trip to Gibraltar, where his son, Wesley, is seriously ill in the British Garrison Hospital. Young Wesley Hill, former football player with Circleville High School, became seriously ill recently while serving with the U. S. Navy in the Mediterranean Sea. Mrs. Hill has received word her husband has arrived safely in Gibraltar and that her son is reported improving.

Bible Words To Live By

My favorite Bible verse is the first part of the Twenty-third Psalm:

"The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

It has been my favorite because of its strong declaration of God's existence. "The Lord is," bringing to mind the personal relationship between the Lord and my life.

"The Lord is my shepherd"—the Psalm suggests the things for which one shall not want. One shall not seek for rest—mentally, emotionally, spiritually or physically, without finding it, for when we are tired He will lead us beside still waters and amid the green pastures.

One shall not want for forgiveness. "For He restoreth my soul," nor can there be a want for guidance. "For He will lead me in paths of righteousness." And, too, one shall never lack the ability to turn tragedy to triumph. "For when I walk through the valley of the shadow of death Thou art with me."

Nor shall one want for an eternal abiding home. "For I shall abide in the house of the Lord forever."

This is my favorite verse because it has everything in it. It is all mine if I have the Shepherd, and none of mine without Him.

Rev. L. S. Metzler

Revival Series Begins Sunday In First EUB

Revival will be held in First Evangelical United Brethren church, E. Main St., from Sunday through Jan. 11 at 7:30 p. m. each night, except Saturday, with the Rev. L. S. Metzler preaching.

The Rev. Mr. Metzler, a member of First church and a resident of Circleville, is a recognized evangelist by the Ohio Southeast Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren church. For a number of years he was pastor of the Pickaway Charge churches. He travels widely in his chosen field of religious activity holding on the average of forty weeks of meetings each year.

Music will be directed by Montford and Lucille Kirkwood, local church organist and choir director. Miss Kirkwood plays the organ and piano and Kirkwood will direct the congregational singing and furnish special vocal numbers each night.

The Rev. Carl L. Wilson will conduct a special prayer period each night at 7 p. m. in the Loyal Daughter Class room.

The public is invited to attend each night.

Communion Rite Due Sunday In Lutheran Church

This Sunday in Trinity Lutheran Church there will be two Communion Services.

The first will be a candlelight service at 8 a. m. and the second service will be at 10:15 a. m.

The Rev. George Troutman will present a Communion Meditation, "God With Us."

Junior Choir will have an anthem and lead the congregational singing.

The Rev. Mr. Troutman says: "as good Christians we should open and close each year in the name of the Triune God and with the means of grace, that is, the Sacraments and the word."

Presbyterians Set Rites For Final Sunday

The last Sunday of 1952 will be emphasized as New Years Sunday in Presbyterian church.

Since it is also the Sunday after Christmas, it is important to follow through with the new outlook, widespread across the nation and seen on many billboards and in the news during the Christmas Season, to "put Christ back into Christmas."

The Rev. Donald Mitchell will preach on the subject, "Keep The Vision." The Scripture basis of the sermon will be read from the Book of Isaiah, chapter 52, and from the Gospel according to St. Luke, chapter 2, the vision of the Shepherds. An anthem, "There Were Shepherds," will be sung by the choir, directed by Mrs. Clark Will. Mrs. Theodore L. Huston will play "Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols," "Virgin's Slumber Song" and "In Dulci Jubilo" at the organ.

Participating in the worship, the congregation will sing the hymns "Joy To The World," "The First Nowell" and "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

The day being designated as "Student Recognition Day," young people enjoying a brief holiday season will be greeted by the pastor.

During the hour preceding worship, Bible study classes will meet in the Sunday school class rooms. Following worship, the nominating committee will meet for a brief period in preparation for the annual meeting of the congregation to be held in January.

Monday afternoon, the Presbytery of Columbus, consisting of two representatives from each of the fifty-two churches in this area, will meet in First Presbyterian church, Columbus, at 1:30 p. m. for the mid-winter meeting.

From Circleville Presbyterian church, the Rev. Mr. Mitchell and one elder will attend to represent the local congregation.

Day Of Prayer Planned Sunday In St. Joseph's

Sunday has been designated by the Bishops of the United States as a day of prayer for the persecuted peoples of the world.

It is a day of reparation for the indignities perpetrated against the Body of Christ in His Church. In proclaiming this nation-wide day of reparation, the Bishops of this country pledge to the prelates and priests and to all Catholics now held imprisoned in the "Church of Silence," the continuing aid of devout and fervent prayers.

In fraternal charity, Catholics in this free land will give to their suffering brothers the encouragement of every help which lies within their power that God in His loving providence may shorten these days of trial and restore peace and tranquility to the church and to the world.

quality to the church and to the world.

In accordance with the mandate of the bishop, there will be perpetual adoration of the Most Blessed Sacrament in St. Joseph's church, starting after the 10 a. m. Mass. Special hours of adoration have been assigned each member of the church. The list will be placed on the bulletin board. All members are urged to make an effort to keep the hours assigned so that someone will be in the church at all times during the exposition. This special service will close with a holy hour, starting at 7:30 p. m.

Men's discussion group will meet at 8 p. m. Monday evening in the basement of the church.

Thursday is the feast of Our Lord's Circumcision. It is a Holy Day of obligation. All Catholics are bound to attend Mass on this day, the same as on Sundays. Masses on this day will be at 8 a. m., a low Mass, and at 10 a. m., a high Mass.

Student Day To Be Observed By Methodists

Members of First Methodist church will observe "national student recognition Sunday" by having the student members of the congregation participate in the morning service at 10:30 a. m.

Dave Parks, freshman in Ohio State university, will have the call to worship and will lead in the collect-prayer. Mary Ellen Young, senior in Ohio State, will lead the congregation in the affirmation of faith.

Robert Phillips, attending dental college in Ohio State, will read the morning scripture lesson. Beverly Reid, sophomore in Ohio State, will lead in the morning prayer.

Charles Magill, freshman in Ohio State, will play a trombone solo, "Ave Maria," as the offertory selection. Jean Heine, senior in Ohio Wesleyan, will read a New Year's poem at the close of the morning sermon.

Ushers for the special student recognition service will be Gene Clifton, freshman in Ohio State; Warren Harmon, junior in Ohio university; Rod Heine of Harvard Medical School; Karl Johnson, junior in Ohio State; William Stout, sophomore in Ohio State; and Gordon Blake, freshman in the University of South Carolina.

The Rev. Robert Weaver has chosen as a title for his sermon for this Sunday morning "A New Beginning." The sermon will develop the theme that every Christian must dedicate himself anew to the task of building a better world by investing himself and his abilities to the work of Christ and His church.

Mrs. Harold Defenbaugh will direct the choir in the spiritual, "Go Tell It On The Mountain." Mrs. Betty Goodman has chosen "Cavalier-Rusticana" and "Song of Joy" as prelude and postlude organ selections.

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

What's the best way to let a boy know that you don't want to date him any more? That's one of the problems of this high school girl:

"I have been going with a boy for about a month now and find that I simply don't like him. He's been a perfect gentleman on our dates, and has never done anything to make me mad or embarrassed."

I would like to know how to tell him that I do not wish to date him any more. I am not very tactful in matters like this, but usually very blunt. I would appreciate it if you could help me with this problem."

Ans. The best way is to let him know without saying a word, blunt or otherwise. It's usually kinder and pleasanter for both the girl and boy if you simply refuse any more dates with him.

When he asks for a date, be pleasant and friendly. Just say, "Thank you, but I'm going to be busy" or something similar.

If you don't add anything about a "raincheck" or another date some other time, he'll soon get the idea. It will help if you can make other plans for the evenings you've been dating him—Friday or Saturday night. Then you'll really be "busy" when he suggests a date and he'll probably find out that you do have other plans, dates and doings.

It's also better to avoid explanations to other girls and boys if they mention that you're not dating him any more. If you told the reason—that you just don't like him—it might be repeated to him, causing hurt feelings or unpleasantness.

Pentecost Theme Planned Sunday In Christ Church

Services of the church of Christ will be held Sunday in the Farm Bureau Home, 159 E. Main St. "Some Great Things of Pentecost" will be the sermon theme for study during worship services. The scripture text will be the second chapter of Acts.

Evangelist Charles Cochran gives the following events connected with the day of Pentecost:

"The first Pentecost day after the death, burial and resurrection of Christ is one of the most significant days of history. It was on this day that the Lord chose to send the Holy Spirit whom he had promised to the apostles when here in the flesh (Lk. 24:49; Acts 1:4-5).

"It was on this day that the apostle Peter preached the first gospel sermon to a great audience of Jews gathered together in Jerusalem. His message was Christ Jesus; approved by miracles, wonders and signs; by wicked hand crucified and slain; raised up and exalted to the right hand of God; reigning as king on his throne and as head of the church (Acts 2:14-36; Eph. 1:20-23).

"It was on this memorable day that those who were guilty of crucifying Jesus were made believers and asked the great question, 'What shall we do?' Peter said unto them, 'Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost' (Acts 2:38).

"The result of this sermon was that 'they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousands souls' (Acts 2:41). It was on this day that the church of the Lord was established as Christ had promised (Mt. 16:18), with the Lord adding the saved to the church (Acts 2:47)."

Wise Men Seek Jesus

When Jesus was born in Bethlehem, three wise men arrived at Jerusalem asking, "Where is He that is born king of the Jews, for we have seen His star in the east and are come to worship Him?"

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

King Herod was worried and so was the whole city. Herod sent for the chief priests and scribes and asked them where the Messiah would be born, they said Bethlehem, according to prophecy.

By Alfred J. Buescher

Then Herod called the wise men to him and asked them where the star appeared. He sent them to Bethlehem, telling them to return to him after they had seen the Child, so that he, too, might go to worship Him.

MEMORY VERSE—Jeremiah 29:13.

The wise men, however, after seeing Jesus and giving Him gifts, returned home another way, and an angel told Joseph to take the Child and His mother and flee to Egypt.

CUTTING THREE WAYS

A PERENNIAL QUESTION—which government agency should be responsible for federal flood control—has again been raised in Congress. Flood control is a tripartite affair. Keeping rivers in their channels is one side of the triangle. Also involved are soil conservation and power generation.

A congressional investigating committee has just recommended that comprehensive responsibility for flood control be lodged in the Army's corps of engineers. The Department of Agriculture, which for years has had conflicting authority with the engineers in certain watersheds, would be limited to an upstream program of land development, but with the work handled by the Army.

The committee appears to have been motivated by an interest in straight-line administration, lodged in one agency, and not by a desire to undermine soil conservation practices.

At the same time the committee proposed the engineers for the top spot it rapped their knuckles for scheduling projects not worth building and implied they have engaged in pork barreling with other agencies and branches of government.

The engineers and Department of Interior reclamation bureau, which gets into the picture with respect to power and irrigation, also were criticized for not keeping costs down.

Flood control, besides having three varying objectives, is now actually administered by three different agencies. It is doubtful whether Congress will assign primary responsibility to one of them without full consideration of the proposal.

"SUNSHINE" STATE

MOTHER NATURE, playing it pretty low down, treated sunshine state Florida to a cold wave the other day, with temperatures ranging from 41 to as low as 20 degrees. Miami, at 41, had its lowest record for the day the chilly blast came.

Some of the wisecracks out to beat the relatives of Lady Wonder at Tropical Park faced the pari-mutuel windows in fur coats. The Gold Coast bathing beauties who felt they must display their charms had to forsake the beaches for indoor pools.

Unexpected events have a way of bringing out a quality of wisdom or inventiveness to deal with them. Maybe the outstanding figure of this shivery day in an upside-down state, where a majority of the population in the south consists of northerners and in the north of southerners, was a Florida farmer, worried about his cucumber crop.

For two hours about dawn he flew over

These Days

The American people are not accustomed to concerning themselves over the question of national security, because in the past such problems did not arise. We have had traitors of the type of Benedict Arnold or bitter intransigents such as Aaron Burr, but in peace or war Americans have been habitually loyal to their country.

The Alger Hiss case, the Remington and Coplon cases, the exposure of the Harold Ware cell, the suicide of Laurence Duggan, the Grand Jury and McCarran Committee exposures of American Communists, and Americans who acted as spies for another country in the United Nations, the Lattimore case, the Vincent, Service, Davies situations in the State Department—these and many other problems raise the question of national security within the government itself.

To them must be added the shocking theft of the atom bomb by obscure individuals, spies on behalf of Soviet Russia, who evaded all the security provisions designed to safeguard America's most important military secret. And to it must be added the leaks concerning the H-bomb, a horrifying performance which establishes beyond doubt that the security provisions in existence are not good and need revision both as to plan and performance.

This is the only country in the world where agents and spies of a foreign land, who have themselves declared that to answer for their deeds would incriminate them, walk about as free men. It is absurd that the only law under which such men as Hiss can be tried is perjury. It is absurd that agents and spies, held for contempt by Congress or even by the courts, are free to do as they choose.

I find that a Committee on the Present Danger has emerged as a wrestler for righteous causes. However, those who have been active in anti-Communist efforts in this country, who have dug up witnesses for Congressional committees, who have gathered together ex-Communists to testify and to find data and individuals, who have risked their careers and their lives—such anti-Communists will not associate themselves with the Committee on the Present Danger because they do not find in the records of those active in it a consistent and prolonged anti-Communism.

There is no need to establish a sanctuary for those who failed to recognize the danger in the 1930's and 1940's.

These Johnnies-come-lately have to be distrusted because they are merely following a popular fashion, which is not good enough. A college president who fought for a pro-Russian professor cannot place himself in anti-Communist leadership and expect any support from those who know his record as he made it himself.

National security begins at home and no one can be excluded from its operations. We are at war today; we are engaged in an active, bitter, daily war in which Americans are being killed. Whoever aids our enemies, in small or great ways, is a peril to our country. If the laws are inadequate to curb his activities, new legislation should be passed.

Lamp Aids Ringworm Diagnosis

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SANITARY barber shops, with efficient inspection, are important to you if you have children, especially boys.

Why? Well, one reason is that children all over the country have been picking up ringworm of the scalp from unsanitized barber instruments. Guiltiest of all, it appears, are the clippers, which are mostly used on boys.

On the Increase

Ringworm of the scalp is one disease that has been on the increase in the United States since 1945. There is hardly a community in which the children have not been infected.

In almost all cases, this disease is caused by a tape of mold, or fungus, picked up from the hair of another person. Once this fungus gets in the scalp of children it infects the hair shaft, growing and spreading until wide portions of the scalp are infected. A person develops immunity to this fungus by the time of puberty, so few adults are bothered with this type of ringworm.

Causes of Infection

Using barber instruments which are inadequately sterilized is one of the chief ways of spreading the infection. Children are also infected from seats in movies, especially the plushy ones that pick up hairs when the child rests his head on the back. Sleeping together, wrestling, or trying on another fellow's hat can also transmit the infection from child to child. The infected hairs are brittle and easily broken off.

This disease may be recognized when a child develops a rounded, coin-shaped baldness or patch of thinning hair. Usually there is much scaling underneath the hair.

When a special type of ultraviolet lamp, called a Wood's light, is played on the head, the infected hairs give off a bright green glow, but healthy hairs do not. This lamp can be used to diagnose the infection and follow its progress during treatment.

Of course, the best way to deal with this disease is to prevent it. This can be done by treating every case and wiping it out in communities where it occurs. Theater owners may disinfect their seats with a chemical that prevents ringworm, known as sterol dihydrochloride. Barber shops must also be kept clean and sanitary.

Once the infection has started, an ointment made with this same substance may clear it up rapidly. The hair should be clipped short during treatment.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

THREE nights after Frisella's and David's wedding, Old Mrs. Forbes died in her sleep, as she had hoped she would; and it was when she was leaving her grandmother's house to go back to her own, after the funeral, that Emily remembered what Sister Mary Theresa had said—that the chapel at St. Margaret's was always open. She wondered now why she had never thought of it before—how she could have helped thinking of it before. She walked slowly across the Square and went up the steps. As she did so, she noticed, for the first time, the words graven on the arch above the door.

PER AUGUSTA AD AUGUSTA

The portress who answered her ring recognized her, though it was so long since she had visited there. "I'm so glad to see you again, Mrs. Field," she said, in her soft, sweet voice. "You've been very much in our thoughts and in our prayers. You'd like to see Sister Mary Theresa, wouldn't you?"

"Not quite yet. I just want to go up to the chapel, if I may."

"Certainly, Mrs. Field. I think you know the way. Of course I'd be glad to come along. Or would you rather be alone?"

"Yes, I do know the way. And thank you, but I would rather go alone."

She went up to the little chapel and knelt down. She did not try to pray; it was so long since she had really prayed that she knew she could not do so now. But gradually the sense of peace and the awareness of Divinity which had come to her so many years before, in this same place, permeated her being again. She raised her eyes to the crucifix on the altar.

"I have to go along alone," she murmured. "There isn't anyone left to go with me now. Unless you will."

"Nothing is hard all the time; there is always an ebb and flow to trouble, just as there is to the tide."

Emily had heard her grandmother say this dozens of times. Now, when she least expected this, she found out the full force of its truth.

The terrible loneliness which had engulfed her after David's marriage and Old Mrs. Forbes' death lasted a surprisingly short while. Emily realized that this was partly because she was so busy that she had no leisure whatsoever for introspection, and very little for reflection; she believed it was also because she resolutely kept her mind on the manifold tasks which confronted her while she was performing them, and did not permit herself to dwell on personal problems, except in connection with these. The periods that she did give over to deliberation were definitely set apart from her numerous and varied activities: some time in the course of every day, she went to St. Margaret's Chapel, if only for a few minutes; and every night, before she went to bed, she devoted a few minutes more to quiet meditation.

She was conscious of no great resurgence of faith, no groping for doctrinal precepts, not even any special leaning toward religion; she made no attempt to force herself to utter prayers which did not come naturally from her heart to her lips or to study sacred subjects. But almost immediately after her desperate avowal that she had only one possible source of communion left, the conviction that she was wholly alone began to lose its terrors and its strength. It appeared that there were, after all, a number of persons to whom she mattered and who mattered to her; in the preoccupation of her thoughts which were centered on David and in the companionship with her grandmother, she had underestimated the importance of these other persons in her life. Now this became apparent, and it seemed to her that the revelation sprang from the same source to which she had appealed; by asking for Divine sustenance, she had been granted the power to find human sustenance also.

The next time Brian came, she told him something quite different. She could not have said why she wanted to, but the fact remained that she did. She told him how she had gone, not habitually, but frequently, before her marriage and in the period immediately thereafter, to St. Margaret's; and how she had stopped going, at first because of Homer Rathrop's cynicism, and later, because she found that a like cynicism had crept through her own being. Then she told him how she had gone there again, the day of her grandmother's funeral, for no other reason than because she felt entirely alone in the world and because she could think of no other place to go. Brian did not jest with her this time, or ask her inopportune questions. He listened attentively and gravely until she had finished telling him everything there was in her heart to say.

They sat in companionable silence for some moments. Then Emily realized that Brian was not grave any longer, that he was grinning again and that there was a twinkle in his eye which was not without a spark of harmless malice.

"Do you remember that the day you took such exception to my technique as a suitor. I asked you whether you were troubled about the possibility that I might drink too much, and you said it really wasn't any affair of yours?"

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, you tempt me to make a similar answer. Why should I be troubled about your religion—unless it is some affair of mine? Why should you think I would be, unless you're ready to admit that it is?"

She rose hastily and walked away from him, conscious of a flaming face. He caught up with her and put his arm around her.

"Sure and it's all right, mavourneen," he said lightly. "And I was a slow dog, and all the rest of it, to trip you up like that. But this time, I'm going to have just one wee kiss and nothing you'll say will stop me, either."

She did not see him alone again for some time, partly because her Uncle Russell moved in upon her almost immediately thereafter, and practically took over the house, and partly because she and Brian were both so preoccupied in different directions. Brian won, hands down, in the primaries. The only other contestant for the nomination was an old ward healer whose bosses belonged to a now-discredited political machine; and, as he himself admitted, the cards were stacked against him from the beginning—what could he do against a rising young lawyer, whose own political backing was powerful, and who was himself a recently returned "hero" into the bargain?

As the campaign advanced, Emily formed the habit of listening to the political news as it came over the radio. Brian not infrequently eluded his lieutenants and also put in an appearance. Emily had come to recognize the probability of such brief visits, which she neither fostered nor discouraged; but it had not entered her head that Brian would make one on election night, or that she would hear from him directly until the following morning. However, when the returns began to come in, he called her over a private wire, and told her that the contest was "too close to be comfortable." An hour or so later, he telephoned again and said he wanted to see her at once.

"You can't leave headquarters now, can you?" she asked, genuinely puzzled.

"I don't know how anyone's going to stop me, if I just walk out. Nobody's put a ball and chain on me yet."

"But—"

"Stop saying 'But!' As I've told you before, I wish it weren't such a favorite word of yours. I'm coming, but you're right, I haven't got much time to spare, and the longer we talk over the telephone, the less time we'll have to talk face to face. Goodbye."

Within five minutes, he appeared, in the whirlwind fashion which had always been more or less normal for him, but which had been intensified by his recent violent activities. He went up to Emily and put his hands under her elbows, not roughly, as he had done once before, but nonetheless firmly.

"Listen," he said, "this thing is getting closer and closer. I still think I'm going to win. I meant to ask you, again, to marry me, after I was sure I had. But I changed my mind. I decided I'd rather ask you before I was sure. I decided I'd got to find out whether you had enough faith in me to believe that, even if I lose now, I'll win some other time."

"I've got all kinds of faith in you, Brian."

"Yes! Brian, you don't care for me the way you cared for Roger, much less the way you cared for David. I know you never will. But you care in another way and it's a good way. Since you've got so much faith in me, you ought to be able to take my word for it that I'm right again. And you know I love you with all my heart and soul. Will you marry me whether I win or lose? Yes or no?"

"Yes!" Emily said.

It was two o'clock in the morning when he came back for her. They did not say much to each other in the course of their drive to South Boston. Brian had given his lieutenants the slip again, with great difficulty this time, and he knew he would have to drive fast to get home before they caught up with him. But they still had not done so when he opened the door of his father's house and all the family rushed forward to meet him. He waved his hat with his free hand and shouted a joyous greeting.

"Emily and I are on our way to Washington!" he cried. "But we thought we'd stop in here first to say hello and to let you know we're going together!"

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

the news

By Ray Tucker

By RAY TUCKER

Editor's Note: Every Saturday this veteran Washington newspaper correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27—"How do you account for Eisenhower's apparent selection of Senator Taft to be majority leader of the Senate?" asks J. L. of Brooklyn. "Doesn't that corroborate the Stevenson-Truman campaign charge that Ike has become Bob's captive?"

Answer: Quite the contrary, in my opinion, although I may be wrong. But I find that most political and parliamentary experts think this was one of Eisenhower's many shrewd moves since his election as President.

Taft, in effect, becomes the quarterback instead of a bench substitute on the Eisenhower team. In that position, he will help Ike to call the signals and direct the plays. It will be to his interest and ambition to do the best possible job.

Everybody, including his enemies, recognizes that the Ohio senator has the finest mind on Capitol Hill. Nor is he the reactionary his enemies make him out to be.

He is unflinchingly honest; his is the kind of honesty that hurts. So, why wouldn't Ike want him as his top Senatorial adviser, with the able "Joe" Martin holding down that job on the House side?

With Taft and Martin in their roles, and Senators Bridges, Knowland and Millikin backstopping in leadership positions, Eisenhower will have an exceptionally able staff on Capitol Hill.

MACARTHUR'S PLAN — "Do you think that MacArthur had a real and constructive solution for winning or ending the so-called 'police action' in Korea?" inquires Mrs. T. F. of Houston, along with many other readers.

Answer: I would not minimize the Eisenhower-MacArthur conversations on this subject because, after all, they are supposed to be our top military strategists. Sitting in with them was our next Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Moreover, although it is not generally known, Eisenhower passed on Mac's new ideas to his old friends on the Joint Chiefs of Staff. What the Ike-Mac meeting meant is that our finest military brains are at last concentrating on this question. Unlike Truman, they are not approaching the Korean problem with petty or closed minds.

That is Eisenhower's great virtue. Regardless of politics and personalities, and he can have no love for MacArthur, he is willing and patient enough to listen and take counsel.

WHAT IKE WILL DO—I doubt, however, if MacArthur has a ready-made solution to Korea. France and England, embroiled in Indochina, Malaya, Iran and Egypt, are even more bitter against Mac's original proposals for more intensive and aggressive action, lest it promote global conflict. The useless and needless truce negotiations have permitted the North Koreans and Chinese Communists to dig in too deep.

What Eisenhower will do, and he would have done it without MacArthur's advice, is (1) to train and equip more South Korean units to take over the front, with Americans in reserve and logistics, and (2) ship more modern weapons, especially artillery, tanks and planes, than Truman has given to our forces there.

Ike wants to withdraw at least three American divisions from Korea, if possible. Hard-hitting and frost-bitten veterans, they would be a powerful, mobile unit for reinforcement action wherever necessary.

In effect, both Eisenhower and Dulles, and they needed no MacArthur advice on this problem, want to take the cold war initiative away from Russia.

COLLECTIONS — "Do you see any need for the proposed $1,500,000 Truman library—or for the Roosevelt and Hoover collections of official papers at Hyde Park and Palo Alto?"

Answer: No, O. P. of Pasadena, Calif., I do not. These several libraries are simply expressions of presidential ego. I believe that

Gala Mistletoe Ball Is Held Friday In Coliseum

600 Persons Attend Event

Highlighting the many social events of the Christmas season, the Mistletoe Ball was held Friday evening in the Coliseum from 10 p. m. until 2 a. m.

Approximately 300 couples were present for the occasion. Formal attire prevailed, however many preferred semi-formal dress.

Ned Mapes orchestra, under the direction of Russ Van played for dancing.

A large decorated Christmas tree was placed in the lobby of the Coliseum. The hall was decorated in red and green. A false ceiling of streamers was suspended over the dance floor, with large clusters of mistletoe down the center. Colored lights were strung around the dancing area and the band stand was draped with red and green paper.

The Kiwanis sponsored event was under the direction of Jack Heeter, general chairman. He was assisted by Dr. R. W. Samuel, music; H. K. Lamm, finance; Guy Campbell, ticket chairman.

Others serving on the ticket committee were Roscoe Warren, Sterling Poling, C. O. Leist and Ernie Hill.

Paul White was chairman of the advertising committee and he was assisted by Lewis Brevard, Robert Wilson and Richard Morris.

Mr. Heeter extended thanks to all committee members and others in helping to complete arrangements.

Decorations and arrangements were directed by Harold Moats and C. E. Linn, and other members of the committees.

The annual event is held to raise funds for the club's child welfare program, which includes aid to underprivileged children, physically handicapped, vocational guidance and Key clubs.

Funds for the Summer playground program at Ted Lewis Park are also received from the Ball.

Many festive parties were given before the dance and during intermission and many out-of-town guests were present for the event.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PHD

In a recent issue of the American Legion magazine appeared a cartoon showing parents standing near a Christmas tree, distressed because their child, about 20 months old, was playing with the empty boxes from which the many expensive toys for him had been emptied.

That youngster was wiser than his parents. He could use his imagination better with the boxes than with the "store" toys.

When our oldest child was about

Christmas Parties Given By Shifts At GE Plant

Circleville Lamp Works of the General Electric Company held its fifth annual Christmas party Wednesday in the plant cafeteria.

Each shift had its own party and after refreshments were served and gifts distributed, a program was presented.

R. J. McCain was master of ceremonies for the day shift.

Slimline group 4 chorus gave two selections, "Silver Bells," and "Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer." Sally Young gave accordion solos and Jo Ann Ayers presented tap dances.

Martha Hohenstein sang "Let's Light the Christmas Tree" and "White Christmas," accompanied by Jane Fullen at the piano.

A girls quartet composed of Clarabelle Carter, Helen Burns, Donna Moss and Ruth Large sang, "O Holy Night," and "Joy to the World." A special version of "Brown Eyes" was given by Betty Smith and Helen Morris.

Comics were Bobby Hill and Doyle Garrett and Marvyn Wilson sang, "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus."

Monty Kirkwood was master of ceremonies for the night shift. Kathleen Picklesimer and Freda Manbevers sang, "I Went to Your Wedding," and Kathleen Jenkins presented several tap dances.

Richard Yocum played his guitar and sang several folk songs. Bob Turvey and Monty Kirkwood presented a comedy sketch, Jim Fraumfelter played a trumpet solo and Ruth Reichelderfer and Monty Kirkwood sang, "Walking in a Winter Wonderland."

Freda Manbevers and Bob Hamilton presented a mandolin and guitar duet and Naomi Chaffin and Freda Manbevers sang, "Blue Christmas."

E. G. Grieg, plant manager, presented perfect attendance congratulations to the following.

For four years attendance, Marvin Justice; three years, Montford Kirkwood, Merle Turner, Charles Rihl and Mary Cockrell; two years, Faye Allen, Leonard Campbell, Robert Cross, Ralph DeLong, Besie Huffer, Melvin Hunt, Matalene Metcalf, Don McFarland, Marvne Shellhammer;

William Stevens and Carroll Cook; one year, Barbara Armstrong, Albert Brown, Richard Buskirk, Robert Cox, Francis Dinkler, Ned Dresbach, Mary Dumm, Garnet Emerine, James Fraumfelter, Charles French;

two, he would spend long periods of time daily pushing a few plain blocks over the floor following the parquet patterns. Sometimes he pushed several blocks together end to end with a short one upright on the front for a "choo-choo."

Often small objects or bits of paper on the top of the blocks were passengers or freight.

Seeing his intense interest in trains, we bought him a large, gaudily painted metal train, presenting it to him with joy in our hearts.

He played with this "store" train for about ten minutes and left it in the corner of the room. Purposely his mother and I did not remove the train for about two weeks. During all that time he had never turned to it again but went on creating train-fun with his simple, plain, un-painted blocks.

I should add that we did find, later, some toys on the market that he enjoyed for long stretches of time.

But that toy lasted longest in appeal which enabled him to put most into it with his imagination, especially till the time when he entered school.

As the big array of vividly illustrated books for young children, many of them around folk lore and other fanciful materials, have appeared rapidly only during the past ten or fifteen years, few of these were available for our babies.

But there were school primers and first and second grade school readers then, full of the fanciful, and the illustrated Three Bears, Three Pigs, Peter Rabbit, Just-So Stories and Stevenson's Garden of Verses.

When our children entered school, folk lore had almost disappeared from school books and books to be found in stores. Animals that talk were taboo. But folk lore and fanciful yarns are now available for our many young grand-children.

EVEN SUCH stories are slowly creeping back into school books.

Out of the changes and developments, it has been discovered that the age for fairy tales is not nine or ten as experts used to say, but much earlier, especially during preschool period.

You young mothers know how eagerly the little child from two to five or six listens to stories not hampered with realities, and how soon he starts to spin like ones from his little head. Being appreciative, you often write them down.

Some of you have sent such creations to me and they are choice literature.

It's in the preschool years when we parents can best cultivate the youngster's precious powers of imagination.

John Timmons Feted At Party

Mrs. Pryor Timmons, Clarksburg gave a surprise party recently for her son, John, who was celebrating his tenth birthday. Games and contests provided entertainment.

Refreshments were served in the dining room where the table was centered with a large decorated cake encircled with holly, bearing red candles in green holders.

John received gifts from George Wright, Terry Aiter, Don Martin, Danny Eitel, Danny Vollmar, Larry Drew, Jerry Rittenhouse, Jay Tootle and Nick Clery.

Letter To The Editor

The Circleville Herald encourages letters to the editor on pertinent subjects of local interest. However, unsigned letters will be disregarded. Non de olume will be used if requested.

EDITOR, THE HERALD:

Good for a Chillicothe resident!

We have been wondering, too, why Circleville was so poorly decorated.

The city was much more attractive with the decorated square of other years.

However, many of the homes were beautifully decorated, both inside and out. That added much to the Christmas spirit.

I'm sure every one appreciates the efforts made by all who decorated.

O'Brien Slated To Set Record

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Johnny O'Brien, the biggest little man in college basketball, shoots for a new four-year college basketball scoring record tonight.

The five foot, nine inch Seattle University star needs only one point to break the record he now shares with Nate DeLong who netted 2,592 points some years ago while playing for River Falls, Wis. State Teachers College. Johnny tied the mark last Tuesday when he scored 29 points against New York University. Seattle faces St. Joseph's College in the first game of a doubleheader in Convention Hall with unbeaten Fordham meeting Temple in the nightcap.

Coast Guard Seeks Plane Down In Lake

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Coast Guard boats today resumed the hunt for a twin engine cargo plane that apparently crashed into Lake Michigan before dawn Wednesday, carrying two Ohio men to death.

The search centered off Wind Point, a promontory north of Racine, after two residents of the area gave tips indicating a plane crashed in that area at the same time the Lockheed Electra was trying to land at Mitchell Field, south of Milwaukee.

Two days of hunting by land, sea and air failed to produce clues. Only boats were used today because operations were centering on a small area. Dragging and sounding techniques were used.

The plane, flying from Columbus, O., to Milwaukee with a load of airplane parts, was last heard from at 2:47 a. m. Wednesday when it asked and received clearance to land at Mitchell Field. Aboard were the pilot, Wilton Lyman 32, of Toledo, and the co-pilot, Robert Taylor, 24, of Marion.

Sokolsky's

The Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, and the House Committee on Un-American Activities need to push into legislation at the earliest possible moment. One of the most urgent acts is to remove altogether the Statute of Limitations involving espionage.

If an American ever engaged in espionage, he should be liable for punishment whenever the case is provable. There is no reason why spies should be given another chance to spy again.

Our sons may during the next few years die violently in war because our national security is weak. They may die because a Russian spy, like Gubitchev, when caught, is sent back to Russia with all the information in his possession.

It is not that we are generous; it is only that we are incompetent and that those who are functioning have been stupid. Both conditions can be corrected.

The Americans in the United Nations who are betraying their country were found out by the untiring persistence of two young lawyers, Robert Morris and Roy Cohn, supported by the McCarran Committee and Attorney General James McGranery. They were fought by many who now hope to establish credit for their work, and the job could have been wrecked had their stupidity prevailed.

The national security cannot be entrusted to position-proud stuffed-shirts with a habit of covering up the errors of an Administration.

City Solicitor Outlines Details Of Municipal Court

Salary Here Might Be At Least $2,000

Court Official Is Barred From Legal Practice

A judge selected for a municipal court in Circleville would have to be paid at least $2,000 a year, although a portion of the salary would be paid by Pickaway County.

These and other important details relating to a municipal court setup, as provided in Ohio's state code, are pointed out by City Solicitor George Gerhardt.

Gerhardt had been asked to list some of the main points in the law relating to a city court. In doing so, he emphasized the code covers municipal court operations only under a general heading and that individual court setups vary.

Prospects of having a municipal court established here have been discussed pro and con for a long time.

ED WALLACE, Pickaway County state representative, has asked local residents to express their views on the subject, warning that the necessary legislation—if any at this time—would have to be introduced during the first six weeks of the assembly.

Pickaway County Bar Association is studying data compiled by Mayor Ed Amey at the Association's request. The association said it wants to see whether the city court plan appears "financially feasible" for Circleville.

Among the points of law bearing on a city court setup, as outlined by Gerhardt, are the following:

COMPENSATION of judge — In territories having a population of not more than 20,000, judges shall receive as compensation an amount not less than $2,000 per annum, as the legislative authority shall prescribe, and the judge thereof shall be disqualified from the practice of law only as to matters pending or originating in said municipal court during his term of office.

In no case shall the compensation of any municipal judge exceed the statutory compensation of a judge of the court of common pleas in the county in which the municipal court is situated, nor shall compensation of a municipal judge exceed $10,500 except the presiding judge of a municipal court shall receive an additional $500 and the chief justice of a municipal court shall receive an additional $1,000. The compensation of municipal judges shall be paid in semi-monthly installments, three-fifths of said amount being payable from the city treasury and two-fifths of such amount being payable from the county in which such city is situated.

EFFECT OF institution of courts; transfer of pending proceedings, with records—Upon the institution of a municipal court, the jurisdiction of the mayor and the police justice in all civil and criminal causes shall terminate within the municipality in which such municipal court is located. All other mayors within the territory may retain such jurisdiction as now provided in all criminal causes involving violation of ordinances of their respective municipalities to be exercised concurrently with the municipal court. Upon the institution of a municipal court, the jurisdiction of justices of the peace and police justices in all civil and criminal causes shall terminate in any township or municipality which is entirely within the territory. Upon the institution of a municipal court, the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in all civil and criminal causes shall terminate in that part of any township which is included within the territory.

Upon the institution of a municipal court, all causes, judgments, executions and proceedings then pending in courts of mayors, police justices, and justices of the peace within the territory as to which their jurisdiction is hereby terminated shall proceed in the municipal court as if originally instituted therein.

DEFINITION of term — "Territory" means the geographical areas within which municipal courts have jurisdiction.

QUALIFICATIONS of judge — A municipal judge during his term of office shall be a qualified elector and a resident of the territory of the court to which he is elected or appointed and shall have been admitted to the practice of law in the state and shall have been actively engaged in the practice of law as

Vets Warned On Supreme Court Ruling

James P. Shea, Pickaway County Veterans' service officer, has called attention to a widespread error made in interpreting a U. S. Supreme Court ruling on GI life insurance beneficiaries.

The high court ruled in two cases that GI insurance policies may be paid only to living persons; that is, they can't be paid to the estates of intended beneficiaries.

This, Shea warned, has been twisted in some published accounts to say the court ruled against paying the policies to the estate of the deceased veteran.

At least one of the state-wide veterans publications misinterpreted the decision in its current issue.

Cases upon which the ruling was based were filed from Massachusetts and New York, where the beneficiaries died before making claim for the insurance of dead servicemen whose deaths occurred before July 31, 1946.

THE NATION'S highest court held, under law then in effect, that the beneficiary did not have vested right in payment of benefits and that the benefits did not pass to his estate but reverted instead to the estate of the insured veteran.

The National Service Life Insurance act was amended on July 31, 1946, permitting insured servicemen and veterans to designate anyone, including the estate of the insured, as beneficiaries. Therefore, no death cases after July 31, 1946, are affected by the decision.

Shea warned Pickaway County servicemen and veterans to check their policies to make sure beneficiaries are properly designated.

2nd Grandma Bandit Hinted In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP)—There's possibly another grandma bank bandit at large in the Los Angeles area.

The distressing news that two grandmotherly women may have been holding up bank tellers here in recent months, developed Thursday when Grandma No. 1, Mrs. Ethel Arata, 52, arrested Christmas Eve when she tried to rob a bank in nearby Arcadia, could not be identified by one of the tellers.

"She doesn't seem to be the same woman who held me up," said Miss June North of the Union Bank & Trust Co., who was robbed of $2,600 by a gray-haired pistol-packing grandma Nov. 12.

Mrs. Arata has steadfastly denied she robbed the Union Bank. Police say she quickly admitted that she stuck up branches of the California Bank Oct. 17 and the Citizens National Bank, Nov. 26, getting a total of $1,469.

Detectives were inclined to believe Mrs. Arata's story of the two holdups and her denial of the other, but Miss North will see her in a police lineup Monday night, just to make certain.

262 Foreign Tars Given Clearance

NEW YORK (AP)—All of 262 seamen aboard six foreign freighters questioned Thursday under the provisions of the new McCarran act were allowed shore leave.

The new immigration and nationality law has been in effect for two days. On Wednesday, 271 crew members of the French liner Liberte were denied shore leave because they failed to answer certain questions required by the law. They spent Christmas Day aboard the vessel.

The McCarran act is aimed at preventing subversives from landing on U. S. shores.

his principal occupation for at least five years.

TERM of judge—All municipal judges, including chief justices, shall be elected for terms of six years.

OFFICE of judge created; number—In each municipal court there shall be one or more judges according to the population of the territory. Each court shall have one judge for any portion of the first 100,000 inhabitants.

British Lads Frown On Job As Paper Boys

U. S. 'Little Merchant' Plan Given Chilly Reception In London

By ROBERT F. S. JONES

LONDON (AP)—In Britain most boys think it is beneath their dignity to earn a few coppers by delivering newspapers.

And it looks like things are going to stay that way, despite a plea by 17 British newsmen that the American system of "little merchant" newsboys might be an idea worth trying.

The suggestion came from a group representing British newspapers of all sizes outside London. After visiting American newspapers under the auspices of the Anglo-American Productivity Council, the group reported:

The "little merchant" system "can be a worthy and healthy effort (which) need not interfere with education and can instill in the youngsters the germ of business ability."

In Britain, the man who sells most of the newspapers is the news agent. He keeps a little shop that sells papers, tobacco and cigarettes, candy and a variety of odds and ends.

He gets his newspapers in bulk from wholesalers, splits them up and generally employs several boys on what the British call a newspaper "round" to push them under front doors. The boys get paid a flat rate—which varies according to the news agent—based on the number of customers on their round.

This system has worked so well for over 50 years that the 47,000 news agents scattered through Britain's towns and villages aren't losing much sleep over the suggestion that "little merchants" take over their work.

Albert Whinfrey, general secretary of the News Agents Federation, points out: The distribution of newspapers in Britain is complicated because well over 50 per cent of papers read are "national dailies" published in London and printed here or in large centers in the north.

The papers arrive at distribution centers by train, where they are collected by wholesalers. "Boys couldn't do this—railways wouldn't take kindly to a pack of kids running around," Whinfrey said.

"They might be able to collect papers direct from publishers in the case of local newspapers, but they wouldn't get very far on the profits from that."

A quick denial that the suggestion was intended to cut out the news agent came from William Ridd, secretary of the Newspaper Newsagents Association.

Ridd, a member of the group that visited the U. S., explained the "little merchant" recommendation was made primarily to get parents and education authorities to change their views on the employment of boys in newspaper rounds.

He suggested the "little merchant" idea could be put into practice by news agents themselves, and wrote in the news agents magazine "National News Agents":

"Public opinion still regards this part-time occupation as something beneath dignity... detrimental to a boy's physical and mental development and well-being."

"American practice has shown such views to be ill-founded."

Despite Ridd's appeal, education authorities probably would step in with a veto if the "little merchant" idea showed signs of being taken seriously.

Newspaper rounds are frowned upon by these authorities as a regrettable necessity to be kept within strict limits. In general, they have banned it for boys under 12 and for hours earlier than seven in the morning. Some of the higher class schools forbid it entirely.

Missing Cadet's Friend To Wed

Plasma Bought By Store Just For 'Publicity'

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Miami Daily News quoted an operator of a veterans surplus store as stating today he bought a supply of blood plasma to get publicity.

The newspaper said William A. Weintraub conceded he bought the plasma "for its unusualness" from the Marine June Co. at Mobile, Ala.

Weintraub previously said he received 43 pints of plasma in a shipment of Army surplus goods from the Army General Depot at Memphis, Tenn.

The story attracted wide attention. The Memphis depot denied any such shipment and said it did not handle plasma. The Defense Department at Washington ordered an investigation.

A Marine colonel was reported flying here to question Weintraub when the store operator told the news it was all a publicity gag.

He said he actually received 21 pints of plasma and 21 pints of distilled water. There still was no explanation of how the plasma got into private hands. Labels indicated it had been donated to the Red Cross.

Ten Ohioans Killed While Out Hunting

COLUMBUS, O. (AP)—The Ohio Division of Wildlife says its records show that 10 Ohio hunters lost their lives during the 1952 hunting season, three more than in 1951.

Two hunters, the division's report said, lost their lives as a direct result of firearms during the squirrel season, one while waterfowl hunting and seven during the rabbit and pheasant season.

No fatalities or injuries were reported during the three-day Ohio deer season.

While fatalities showed an increase, a drop was noted in the number of injuries from the same cause during the year.

In 1951, a total of 112 injuries were reported from firearms while hunting. This year there were reports on only 79 persons suffering non-fatal gunshot wounds.

The average age of hunters injured fatally was 24, while the average age of those injured was slightly over 16.

All but one of the fatal accidents were caused by the victims' own gun.

Retailers Set New Records In Yule Trade

National Average Dollar Volume 5 Pct. Above Year Ago

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Retailers in most parts of the country—in first reports coming in today—set new records for Christmas trade.

When final returns are in, dollar volume of gift giving this year may be found to have topped last year's yuletide rush by more than five per cent, on a national average.

A good January is expected, too, as merchants plan for clearance sales and other promotions. The retail trade revival which started last summer is expected to hold over well into 1953.

Total dollar volume of retail trade in the final days before Christmas is estimated by Dun & Bradstreet as ranging from 5 per cent better than a year ago in the east to as high as 13 per cent better in the South and Southwest.

Apparel stores report an unexpected rush of last-minute shoppers, and their gains over a year ago may top those of department stores. Some big city department stores continued to trail, but their branches in the suburbs report good business.

January business may get a boost from the distribution of year-end dividends by corporations and by savings associations.

The United States Savings and Loan League estimates 12 million Americans next week will receive 252 million dollars in year-end dividends from the nation's savings associations and cooperative banks.

Assets of the associations rose 15 per cent this year, the league reports, and now approaches a 22 billion dollar total.

The chain stores and mail order houses, who through most of 1952 were reporting bigger gains in business than were the department stores, are counting on a big after-Christmas shopping spurge.

To tempt the customers, two of the Chicago mail-order houses are out today with midwinter catalogs. Both feature price cuts.

Sears Roebuck's new book of offers promotions with prices as much as 50 per cent lower than a year ago. Officials say the average for all lines is a nine per cent reduction.

Alden's spring-summer catalog shows prices averaging 2 1/2 per cent lower than in the fall catalog, and about 5 per cent lower than a year ago.

On another price front the consumer isn't doing as well. For the first time in 11 weeks the Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index has turned upward. It is still, however, well below last year and hovers around the pre-Korean level.

Retail food prices continue high. But the pre-Christmas sales of food set a new record. Consumers apparently had plenty of money to

Ike Hinted Planning Talk About Stalin

NEW YORK (AP)—A typically American merry Christmas behind him, President-elect Eisenhower may interrupt his planned week end rest to discuss with aides Soviet Premier Stalin's publicized willingness to meet with him.

On his way to yule church services yesterday, Eisenhower was asked by newsmen what he thought about such a meeting.

"I won't have anything to say on that this morning, I assure you," the general replied.

In Washington yesterday, Eisenhower's secretary of state-designate, John Foster Dulles, said he has "nothing to say" until he talks with his chief. Dulles added he planned to return to New York today.

In replying to four written questions from the New York Times, Stalin also said he is "interested in ending the war in Korea" and does not consider an East-West conflict inevitable.

Eisenhower spent the holiday with his family, opening packages beside the big Christmas tree, eating a turkey dinner, and playing with his three grandchildren—David, 4, Barbara, 2, and Susan, 11 months. The Eisenhower's son, John, is a major in Korea.

With Eisenhower and his wife, Mamie, throughout the day were the general's mother-in-law, Mrs. Elvira Doud, and their daughter-in-law Mrs. John Eisenhower.

Wisconsin Band Member Is Late

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—The 155-man University of Wisconsin band is on its way to California and the Rose Bowl with 154 members.

Curtis Winterfeldt of Shiocton, Wis., overslept and missed the train that left Madison Christmas morning. He will leave on a special student train Saturday.

Band Director Ray Dvorak reported from Omaha, where the train had a layover, that the bandmen had suffered pricked fingers while trying to sew new insignia on their uniforms.

Mile-Long Auto Conveyor Planned

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—Studebaker Corp. said today it is building a mile-long automobile body conveyor, one of the longest in the industry, to speed production and increase efficiency.

The $625,000 installation, under contract to Anchor Steel and Conveyor Co., Detroit, will carry fabricated bodies and hardware trim to the final assembly line. On the return trip it will carry fenders from a supply building to the body plant.

Heart Attacks Claim Two Men

SHADYSIDE, O. (AP)—Peter Schramm, 80, collapsed on a street here Christmas night and lay dying, apparently of a heart attack.

Charles Boyd, 33, saw Schramm's collapse and ran to give aid. Suddenly Boyd, too, was stricken by a heart attack.

Both men died. Both were Shadyside residents.

HIGHWAY KILLINGS NEAR RECORD

Ike Won't Be Hoodwinked By Stalin

At Halfway Mark, Holiday Toll Is 336

Total Is Even Better Than War Slaughter; Ohio Still Paces U. S.

By The Associated Press
The nation's traffic death toll raced along at a reckless pace today and appeared headed for an all-time record for a four-day Christmas holiday.

Deaths on the nation's highways, at a little past the halfway mark in the extended holiday week end, reached 336. Nearly 100 other persons lost their lives in various types of accidents, including 43 in fires. No deaths from Christmas tree fires were reported.

The slaughter at home was far in excess of casualties being recorded in the Korean war during the same period.

Yet, Americans shrugged off the staggering figures which they, themselves, were marking up.

There were relatively few aircraft accidents reported. In fact, the Christmas season has yet to produce a single airplane fatality. Yet, should an aircraft accident be reported, Americans habitually would "oh and ah" but would show little concern over the flow of blood resulting from surface travel mishaps.

OHIO CONTINUED to hold the dubious honor of pacing the entire nation. The Buckeye state had recorded 33 highway killings as of Saturday noon. In addition, two persons died in fires and two were struck by trains.

Col. George Mingle of the Ohio Highway Patrol termed the fatalities "highway slaughter." He promised to "hit even harder in an all-out effort to stop these killings."

Col. Mingle said the patrol increased its enforcement facilities 200 per cent since the Christmas week end last year, when 12 persons died on Ohio highways. A total of 29 accidental deaths were reported last year, with fire claiming 13 lives.

The weather bureau forecast indicated continued cold weather with scattered snow flurries over most of the state. No heavy snow was in sight for the state.

The National Safety Council, expressing concern at the high accident rate, urged motorists to use "common sense, courtesy and a practical application of the Christmas spirit." It warned of the "biggest, ugliest traffic death toll ever piled up on any holiday in the history of our country."

The record slaughter on the highways was during the four-day Christmas holiday of 1936 when 555 persons were killed in motor accidents. Last year's Christmas holiday recorded the nation's highest accidental death toll, a staggering 789, including 535 traffic fatalities.

THE COUNCIL had estimated 590 deaths in traffic accidents for this year's four-day holiday.

The council said indications were that the estimate now appears conservative unless there is a sharp falling off in deaths today and Sunday.

Major factors for the current high accident toll, they said, included driving under the influence of alcohol, deceptive driving conditions and lack of common sense and courtesy.

The nation's traffic toll in the first 11 months this year averaged 102 every 24 hours. However, this figure included deaths resulting from injuries long after the accidents in which the victims were injured. The holiday survey covers only deaths within the period and the figures are not properly comparable.

13 Boys Placed On Probation

ELYRIA — Thirteen Lorain boys, aged 13 to 20, were put on indefinite probation Friday after they pleaded guilty to contributing to the delinquency of five teen-aged girls during wild parties last summer.

The girls, who admitted sexual intimacy and drinking with the youths during house and beach parties in Lorain and Vermilion, were put on probation several weeks ago. Judge W. E. Kellogg, Medina County common pleas judge assigned to the juvenile court for the case, imposed 60-day jail sentences on the 13 boys, but suspended the sentences pending their good behavior during probation.

General Wants World Peace, But Honorably

U. S. President-Elect Answers Russia, But Next Move Up To Reds

NEW YORK — President-elect Eisenhower's aides say he is dedicated to achievement of durable world peace with honor but is wary of being hoodwinked by the Russians at any conference with Premier Stalin.

That is the way the general's aides privately are summing up the general's position on Stalin's stated interest in ending the Korean war and his indicated willingness to confer with Eisenhower to ease world tension.

The general reportedly will insist that the new administration know in advance just what Stalin has in mind before thinking seriously about any face-to-face conference with the Soviet leader.

He is understood to feel there must somehow be some convincing demonstration of good faith on the part of Russia as a forerunner of any meeting.

There appears to be no great optimism at the Eisenhower headquarters that such conditions would be met.

THE GENERAL himself expressed his views regarding the situation when he told a news conference last June that he would meet with Stalin if he thought it would help the cause of peace. He said he would "do anything and go anywhere" if he thought it would contribute to world peace, but he also declared he saw no prospect that a meeting with Stalin would solve world problems.

However, the latest Stalin move is not being taken lightly by Eisenhower or his key aides. They realize that in the eyes of the world, Stalin in effect has said:

"Let's get together and talk peace."

Whether it's propaganda or not, it put the new administration on the spot. The reply of John Foster Dulles, secretary of state-designate, approved by Eisenhower, challenged the Russians to prove they aren't bluffing.

And the next move, so far as the new administration is concerned, is up to Stalin.

The incoming administration has called on Stalin to set forth any concrete proposals he has.

"He can rest assured they will be seriously and sympathetically received," Dulles said in Washington Friday after a telephone conference with Eisenhower in New York.

Dulles suggested that Stalin outline specific peace proposals to the new administration after Eisenhower takes office Jan. 20.

THE SOVIET premier's latest overture was made in a statement issued by the Russian Embassy in Washington in reply to questions submitted by the New York Times' diplomatic correspondent, James Reston, a Pulitzer Prize winner.

In his statement, Dulles also suggested that any Soviet proposals be submitted to the Eisenhower administration through the usual diplomatic channels or through the United Nations.

Such channels, Dulles added, always are available "for exchanges of views designed to find ways to promote peace and international good will."

That suggestion was regarded generally as a partial test of whether the Stalin statement was in good faith or, on the other hand, another Soviet propaganda move.

Santa Even Visits Kids On POW Isle

KOJE ISLAND — Santa Claus even found a moment to visit this bleak prisoner of war island.

Twenty-three Korean children whose mothers are behind barbed wire donned paper hats and played with balloons and candy-filled stockings. A Christmas party was staged in the schoolhouse within the stockade where the prisoner of war mothers and children live. They are separated by barbed wire from thousands of Communist war captives.

Probers Label Lamar Caudle As 'Honorable' But 'Weak'

WASHINGTON — A House committee today called former Asst. Atty. Gen. T. Lamar Caudle "an honorably motivated" but "weak" government official.

It also termed him "a scapegoat" in being fired in November, 1951, by President Truman for "outside activities."

The labels were applied by a judiciary subcommittee, headed by Reps. Clegg (D-Ky.) and Keating (R-N.Y.), which has been investigating the Justice Department.

The committee reported it is convinced the former head of the department's Criminal and Tax Divisions "never sold himself for riches or for power."

But it pointed to his career as

Dixie Seen Showing Power In Congress

WASHINGTON — Southern state backing of President-elect Eisenhower in the Nov. 4 election should be reflected in his legislative proposals to the new Congress, Sen. Mundt (R-SD) said today.

Mundt predicted the 83rd Congress, which convenes one week from today, will reach its major decisions through "a working combination of Republicans and Southern Democrats."

Although the session will be Republican-controlled, he said, any legislation projected by Eisenhower "must depend upon support of conservative Southern Democrats."

If Mundt is right, and many members of the new Congress agree with him, any broad civil rights measures, like federal anti-discrimination and fair employment practices commission FEPC, would have as tough sledding as under President Truman.

Eisenhower reaped a rich vote harvest last month by carrying Texas, Florida, Virginia and Tennessee in the presidential election.

Mundt said this political fact should be reflected in the Eisenhower legislative proposals.

Mundt said a Republican-Democratic coalition will decide such major issues as "the depth of tax reduction, sharp economies in federal spending and the all-important issues regarding federal versus state or local controls, including FEPC, tidelands oil land ownership, health and education programs."

2 Youths Killed In Auto Crash

DANESE, W. Va. — Two youths were killed near here Friday when their car left U. S. 19 and struck a rock cliff.

State Police identified the dead as Ellis H. Wells, 19, formerly of Danese and now a resident of Sharon Center, O., and Robert E. Thomas, 20, of Danese.

HST Says Strong U. S. Means Peace

Outgoing President Sure His Decisions In Past Have Been OK

WASHINGTON — President Truman is getting ready to leave office convinced that a strong America, co-operating with strong and healthy partner nations, can maintain peace with Russia.

He believes his decision to send American troops into Korea under a United Nations mandate may have saved the world from another global war.

That step, he says, was the toughest decision he ever had to make, tougher even than the one to drop atomic bombs on Japanese cities in 1945, because it involved the risk of a third world war.

Truman is proud of his record on foreign affairs and feels that, when the history of his administration is written by future researchers, it will be noted for having kept the world out of war for nearly eight crisis-ridden years.

HE IS PLANNING a nation-wide broadcast sometime in January summing up what he considers the achievements of his administration and charting the course he thinks the nation will follow. It would be an elaboration on his State of the Union message to Congress, to be delivered early in the session opening Jan. 3.

He is proud of the Greek-Turkish aid program, the Marshall Plan and the succeeding steps undertaken by this government to strengthen the economic and military potential of Communist-threatened nations.

These were bold steps, he said, but the decision to enter South Korea when the North Korean Reds invaded it, in his view, was the "toughest" of all.

When he ordered the bombing of Japan, Truman said, he was told it would shorten the war and save the lives of possibly 25,000 Americans and as many Japanese.

In that case, there was no question of the course to take, he said. In Korea, he said, the whole life of the United Nations was involved. It was a question of acting at the possible risk of a third world war.

He said he is convinced that the decision was a right one, and that

Churchill Wants To Be In On Any Ike-Stalin Peace Parley

WASHINGTON — Britain's Prime Minister Churchill undoubtedly will demand recognition as a full participant in any Eisenhower-Stalin meeting aimed at easing world tension.

American officials who forecast this today made it plain, however, that they see little chance of any such top-level East-West conference unless Russia shows in advance a genuine desire to end the Cold War.

John Foster Dulles, President-elect Eisenhower's secretary of state-designate, emphasized this Friday in calling for "concrete proposals" from Russia before any meeting between Eisenhower and the Soviet premier.

Responsible American diplomats said they believe any such "concrete proposals," in order to be worth following up, would have to indicate plainly that Moscow is prepared to make some concession.

A hint that Russia might be willing to end the Korean war on terms acceptable to the West would fall into this category, they said.

EVEN THOUGH an Eisenhower-Stalin meeting at present seems remote, the 78-year-old Churchill

Athens Worker Dies In Wreck

GLASGOW, Mont. — Kyle Lester, 60, of Athens, O., died and his wife was injured when his truck left the road near here Christmas night.

The couple was returning to Ohio after he completed work on a Canadian pipeline project. State highway patrolmen said Lester may have suffered a heart attack before the truck left the highway.

Four Vacancies On Police Force Possible Shortly After New Year

Circleville administration officials will have a serious problem confronting them shortly after the new year.

Two city policemen have announced their intentions of quitting the force to take on jobs offering more cash and a third man, on leave from the force because of Army service, has indicated he does not plan to return.

Mayor Ed Amey said Saturday Officer Mack Wise has prepared a resignation from the force, effective Jan. 15, in order to accept employment in North American plant, Columbus.

And Officer Charles Smith is considering a post at Lockbourne Air Force Base. Smith is expected to learn within a week whether he will make the change.

DIXIE WATERS, on leave from the department while serving with the Army, has returned home but is not expected to return to his job on the force.

Waters has indicated he plans to take employment in Chillicothe. In each case, the Mayor said, the plans were made because of higher salaries offered in the prospective jobs. The indicated plans followed a refusal by City Council to grant pay raises to the police force and to the firemen, seemingly connected by a common link.

"The boys like the work and are happy here," Amey said. "They just want more money."

Although Wise's resignation is dated effective Jan. 15, he is expected to begin his new duties Jan. 5 by employing "days off" accumulated during this year on the force.

First step by administrators to replenish the supply of men on the force will be to request for a civil service exam in the near future.

But even that, using past experience as a guide, possibly will not supply enough men to come up to strength.

ACTUALLY, four spots on the force will be open if the three men proceed with their indicated

'Hunting' Tally Is Given By GI

DAYTON — Pfc. Richard Raiff has answered a Dayton newspaper hunting survey with the notation he bagged one "Gook." GI slang for a North Korean.

The newspaper received the report Friday from the Dayton soldier, stationed in Korea. Raiff had filled out the game kill questionnaire published in the paper. He said:

"I hunted in no-man's land today and bagged one 'gook' and no rabbits. I spent 14 hours in the field."

The soldier answered the question on whether game was scarce with a "hell, no."

Liberian Vessel Loses Propeller

NEW YORK — The Coast Guard reported early today that the 7,157-ton freighter Archimede radioed it lost a propeller about 350 miles southwest of the Azores, but was in no immediate trouble.

The message from the ship, of Liberian registry, said the vessel intended to drop anchor and wait for tugboat service.

Pentecost Theme Planned Sunday In Christ Church
Services of the church of Christ will be held Sunday in the Farm Bureau Home, 159 E. Main St. "Some Great Things of Pentecost" will be the sermon theme for study during worship services. The scripture text will be the second chapter of Acts.

Evangelist Charles Cochran gives the following events connected with the day of Pentecost:

"The first Pentecost day after the death, burial and resurrection of Christ is one of the most significant days of history. It was on this day that the Lord chose to send the Holy Spirit whom he had promised to the apostles when here in the flesh (Lk. 24:49; Acts 1:4-5).

"It was on this day that the apostle Peter preached the first gospel sermon to a great audience of Jews gathered together in Jerusalem. His message was Christ Jesus; approved by miracles, wonders and signs; by wicked hand crucified and slain; raised up and exalted to the right hand of God; reigning as king on his throne and as head of the church (Acts 2:14-36; Eph. 1:20-23).

"It was on this memorable day that those who were guilty of crucifying Jesus were made believers and asked the great question, 'What shall we do?' Peter said unto them, 'Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost' (Acts 2:38).

"The result of this sermon was that they that gladly received his word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousands souls' (Acts 2:41). It was on this day that the church of the Lord was established as Christ had promised (Mt. 16:18), with the Lord adding the saved to the church (Acts 2:47)."

Guest Minister Due Sunday In Pilgrim Church
Due to the absence of the Rev. Alonzo Hill on a mercy flight to visit his son in Gibraltar, the Rev. Robert Weaver of First Methodist church will present worship services at 7:30 p. m. Sunday in Pilgrim Holiness church.

The Rev. Mr. Hill left last week on an airplane trip to Gibraltar, where his son, Wesley, is seriously ill in the British Garrison Hospital.

Young Wesley Hill, former football player with Circleville High School, became seriously ill recently while serving with the U. S. Navy in the Mediterranean Sea.

Mrs. Hill has received word her husband has arrived safely in Gibraltar and that her son is reported improving.

Bible Words To Live By

My favorite Bible verse is the first part of the Twenty-Third Psalm:

"The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

It has been my favorite because of its strong declaration of God's existence. "The Lord is," bringing to mind the personal relationship between the Lord and my life.

"The Lord is my shepherd"—the Psalm suggests the things for which one shall not want. One shall not seek for rest—mentally, emotionally, spiritually or physically, without finding it, for when we are tired He will lead us beside still waters and amid the green pastures.

One shall not want for forgiveness, "For He restoreth my soul," nor can there be a want for guidance, "For He will lead me in paths of righteousness." And, too, one should never lack the ability to turn tragedy to triumph, "For when I walk through the valley of the shadow of death Thou art with me."

Nor shall one want for an eternal abiding home, "For I shall abide in the house of the Lord forever."

This is my favorite verse because it has everything in it. It is all mine if I have the Shepherd, and none of mine without Him.

Revival Series Begins Sunday In First EUB

Revival will be held in First Evangelical United Brethren church, E. Main St., from Sunday through Jan. 11 at 7:30 p. m. each night, except Saturday, with the Rev. L. S. Metzler preaching.

The Rev. Mr. Metzler, a member of First church and a resident of Circleville, is a recognized evangelist by the Ohio Southeast Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren church. For a number of years he was pastor of the Pickaway Charge churches. He travels widely in his chosen field of religious activity holding on the average of forty weeks of meetings each year.

Monday afternoon, the Presbytery of Columbus, consisting of two representatives from each of the fifty-two churches in this area, will meet in First Presbyterian church, Columbus, at 1:30 p. m. for the mid-Winter meeting.

From Circleville Presbyterian church, the Rev. Mr. Mitchell and one elder will attend to represent the local congregation.

Communion Rite Due Sunday In Lutheran Church

This Sunday in Trinity Lutheran Church there will be two Communion Services.

The first will be a candlelight service at 8 a. m. and the second service will be at 10:15 a. m.

The Rev. George Troutman will present a Communion Meditation, "God With Us."

Junior Choir will have an anthem and lead the congregational singing.

The Rev. Mr. Troutman says: "As good Christians we should open and close each year in the name of the Triune God and with the means of grace, that is, the Sacraments and the word."

Presbyterians Set Rites For Final Sunday

The last Sunday of 1952 will be emphasized as New Years Sunday in Presbyterian church.

Since it is also the Sunday after Christmas, it is important to follow through with the new outlook, widespread across the nation and seen on many billboards and in the news during the Christmas Season, to "put Christ back into Christmas."

The Rev. Donald Mitchell will preach on the subject, "Keep The Vision." The Scripture basis of the sermon will be read from the Book of Isaiah, chapter 52, and from the Gospel according to St. Luke, chapter 2, the vision of the Shepherds.

An anthem, "There Were Shepherds," will be sung by the Choir, directed by Mrs. Clark Will. Mrs. Theodore L. Huston will play "Fantasia on Old Christmas Carols," "Virgin's Slumber Song" and "In Dulci Jubilo" at the organ.

Participating in the worship, the congregation will sing the hymns "Joy To The World," "The First Nowell" and "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

The day being designated as "Student Recognition Day," young people enjoying a brief holiday season will be greeted by the pastor.

During the hour preceding worship, Bible study classes will meet in the Sunday school class rooms.

Following worship, the nominating committee will meet for a brief period in preparation for the annual meeting of the congregation to be held in January.

Monday afternoon, the Presbytery of Columbus, consisting of two representatives from each of the fifty-two churches in this area, will meet in First Presbyterian church, Columbus, at 1:30 p. m. for the mid-Winter meeting.

From Circleville Presbyterian church, the Rev. Mr. Mitchell and one elder will attend to represent the local congregation.

Day Of Prayer Planned Sunday In St. Joseph's

Sunday has been designated by the Bishops of the United States as a day of prayer for the persecuted peoples of the world.

It is a day of reparation for the indignities perpetrated against the Body of Christ in His Church. In proclaiming this nation-wide day of reparation, the Bishops of this country pledge to the prelates and priests and to all Catholics now held imprisoned in the "Church of Silence" the continuing aid of devout and fervent prayers.

In fraternal charity, Catholics in this free land will give to their suffering brothers the encouragement of every help which lies within their power that God in His loving providence may shorten these days of trial and restore peace and tranquility to the church and to the world.

quality to the church and to the world.

In accordance with the mandate of the bishop, there will be perpetual adoration of the Most Blessed Sacrament in St. Joseph's church, starting after the 10 a. m. Mass. Special hours of adoration have been assigned each member of the church. The list will be placed on the bulletin board. All members are urged to make an effort to keep the hours assigned so that someone will be in the church at all times during the exposition. This special service will close with a holy hour, starting at 7:30 p. m.

Men's discussion group will meet at 8 p. m. Monday evening in the basement of the church.

Thursday is the feast of Our Lord's Circumcision. It is a Holy Day of obligation. All Catholics are bound to attend Mass on this day, the same as on Sundays. Masses on this day will be at 8 a. m., a low Mass, and at 10 a. m., a high Mass.

Student Day To Be Observed By Methodists

Members of First Methodist church will observe "national student recognition Sunday" by having the student members of the congregation participate in the morning service at 10:30 a. m.

Dave Parks, freshman in Ohio State university, will have the call to worship and will lead in the collect prayer. Mary Ellen Young, senior in Ohio State, will lead the congregation in the affirmation of faith.

Robert Phillips, attending dental college in Ohio State, will read the morning scripture lesson. Beverly Reid, sophomore in Ohio State, will lead in the morning prayer.

Charles Magill, freshman in Ohio State, will play a trombone solo, "Ave Maria," as the offertory selection. Jean Heine, senior in Ohio Wesleyan, will read a New Year's poem at the close of the morning sermon.

Ushers for the special student recognition service will be Gene Clifton, freshman in Ohio State; Warren Harmon, junior in Ohio university; Rod Heine of Harvard Medical School; Karl Johnson, junior in Ohio State; William Stout, sophomore in Ohio State; and Gordon Blake, freshman in the University of South Carolina.

The Rev. Robert Weaver has chosen as a title for his sermon for this Sunday morning "A New Beginning." The sermon will develop the theme that every Christian must dedicate himself anew to the task of building a better world by investing himself and his abilities to the work of Christ and His church.

Mrs. Harold Defenbaugh will direct the choir in the spiritual, "Go Tell It On The Mountain." Mrs. Betty Goodman has chosen "Cavallier-Rustucana" and "Song of Joy" as prelude and postlude organ selections.

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

What's the best way to let a boy know that you don't want to date him any more? That's one of the problems of this high school girl:

"I have been going with a boy for about a month now and find that I simply don't like him. He's been a perfect gentleman on our dates, and has never done anything to make me mad or embarrassed. I would like to know how to tell him that I do not wish to date him any more. I am not very tactful in matters like this, but usually very blunt. I would appreciate it if you could help me with this problem."

Ans. The best way is to let him know without saying a word, blunt or otherwise. It's usually kinder and pleasanter for both the girl and boy if you simply refuse any more dates with him.

When he asks for a date, be pleasant and friendly. Just say, "Thank you, but I'm going to be busy" or something similar.

If you don't add anything about a "raincheck" or another date some other time, he'll soon get the idea. It will help if you can make other plans for the evenings you've been dating him—Friday or Saturday night. Then you'll really be "busy" when he suggests a date and he'll probably find out that you do have other plans, dates and doings.

It's also better to avoid explanations to other girls and boys if they mention that you're not dating him any more. If you told the reason—that you just don't like him—it might be repeated to him, causing hurt feelings or unpleasantness.

Wise Men Seek Jesus

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 2.

When Jesus was born in Bethlehem, three wise men arrived at Jerusalem asking, "Where is He that is born king of the Jews, for we have seen His star in the east and are come to worship Him?"

King Herod was worried and so was the whole city. Herod sent for the chief priests and scribes and asked them where the Messiah would be born, and they said Bethlehem, according to prophecy.

Then Herod called the wise men to him and asked them where the star appeared. He sent them to Bethlehem, telling them to return to him after they had seen the Child, so that he, too, might go to worship Him.

The wise men, however, after seeing Jesus and giving Him gifts, returned home another way, and an angel told Joseph to take the Child and His mother and flee to Egypt.

CUTTING THREE WAYS

A PERENNIAL QUESTION—which government agency should be responsible for federal flood control—has again been raised in Congress. Flood control is a tripartite affair. Keeping rivers in their channels is one side of the triangle. Also involved are soil conservation and power generation.

A congressional investigating committee has just recommended that comprehensive responsibility for flood control be lodged in the Army's corps of engineers. The Department of Agriculture, which for years has had conflicting authority with the engineers in certain watersheds, would be limited to an upstream program of land development, but with the work handled by the Army.

The committee appears to have been motivated by an interest in straight-line administration, lodged in one agency, and not by a desire to undermine soil conservation practices.

At the same time the committee proposed the engineers for the top spot it rapped their knuckles for scheduling projects not worth building and implied they have engaged in pork barreling with other agencies and branches of government.

The engineers and Department of Interior reclamation bureau, which gets into the picture with respect to power and irrigation, also were criticized for not keeping costs down.

Flood control, besides having three varying objectives, is now actually administered by three different agencies. It is doubtful whether Congress will assign primary responsibility to one of them without full consideration of the proposal.

"SUNSHINE" STATE

MOTHER NATURE, playing it pretty low down, treated sunshine state Florida to a cold wave the other day, with temperatures ranging from 41 to as low as 20 degrees. Miami, at 41, had its lowest record for the day the chilly blast came.

Some of the wisecracks out to beat the relatives of Lady Wonder at Tropical Park faced the pari-mutuel windows in fur coats. The Gold Coast bathing beauties who felt they must display their charms had to forsake the beaches for indoor pools.

Unexpected events have a way of bringing out a quality of wisdom or inventiveness to deal with them. Maybe the outstanding figure of this shivery day in an upside-down state, where a majority of the population in the south consists of northerners and in the north of southerners, was a Florida farmer, worried about his cucumber crop.

For two hours about dawn he flew over

These Days

The American people are not accustomed to concerning themselves over the question of national security, because in the past such problems did not arise. We have had traitors of the type of Benedict Arnold or bitter intransigents such as Aaron Burr, but in peace or war Americans have been habitually loyal to their country.

The Alger Hiss case, the Remington and Coplan cases, the exposure of the Harold Ware cell, the suicide of Laurence Duggan, the Grand Jury and McCarran Committee exposures of American Communists, and Americans who acted as spies for another country in the United Nations, the Lattimore case, the Vincent, Service, Davies situations in the State Department—these and many other problems raise the question of national security within the government itself.

To them must be added the shocking theft of the atom bomb by obscure individuals, spies on behalf of Soviet Russia, who evaded all the security provisions designed to safeguard America's most important military secret. And to it must be added the leaks concerning the H-bomb, a horrifying performance which establishes beyond doubt that the security provisions in existence are not good and need revision both as to plan and performance.

This is the only country in the world where agents and spies of a foreign land, who have themselves declared that to answer for their deeds would incriminate them, walk about as free men. It is absurd that the only law under which such men as Hiss can be tried is perjury. It is absurd that agents and spies, held for contempt by Congress or even by the courts, are free to do as they choose.

I find that a Committee on the Present Danger has emerged as a wrestler for righteous causes. However, those who have been active in anti-Communist efforts in this country, who have dug up witnesses for Congressional committees, who have gathered together ex-Communists to testify and to find data and individuals, who have risked their careers and their lives—such anti-Communists will not associate themselves with the Committee on the Present Danger because they do not find in the records of those active in it a consistent and prolonged anti-Communism.

There is no need to establish a sanctuary for those who failed to recognize the danger in the 1930's and 1940's.

These Johnnies-come-lately have to be distrusted because they are merely following a popular fashion, which is not good enough. A college president who fought for a pro-Russian professor cannot place himself in anti-Communist leadership and expect any support from those who know his record as he made it himself.

National security begins at home and no one can be excluded from its operations. We are at war today; we are engaged in an active, bitter, daily war in which Americans are being killed. Whoever aids our enemies, in small or great ways, is a peril to our country. If the laws are inadequate to curb his activities, new legislation should be passed.

Lamp Aids Ringworm Diagnosis

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SANITARY barber shops, with efficient inspection, are important to you if you have children, especially boys.

Why? Well, one reason is that children all over the country have been picking up ringworm of the scalp from unsterilized barber instruments. Guiltiest of all, it appears, are the clippers, which are mostly used on boys.

On the Increase

Ringworm of the scalp is one disease that has been on the increase in the United States since 1945. There is hardly a community in which the children have not been infected.

In almost all cases, this disease is caused by a tape of mold, or fungus, picked up from the hair of another person. Once this fungus gets in the scalp of children it infects the hair shaft, growing and spreading until wide portions of the scalp are infected.

A person develops immunity to this fungus by the time of puberty, so few adults are bothered with this type of ringworm.

Causes of Infection

Using barber instruments which are inadequately sterilized is one of the chief ways of spreading the infection. Children are also infected from seats in movies, especially the plushy ones that pick up hairs when the child rests his head on the back. Sleeping together, wrestling, or trying on another fellow's hat can also transmit the infection from child to child. The infected hairs are brittle and easily broken off.

This disease may be recognized when a child develops a rounded, coin-shaped baldness or patch of thinning hair. Usually there is much scaling underneath the hair.

When a special type of ultraviolet lamp, called a Wood's light, is played on the head, the infected hairs give off a bright green glow, but healthy hairs do not. This lamp can be used to diagnose the infection and follow its progress during treatment.

Of course, the best way to deal with this disease is to prevent it. This can be done by treating every case and wiping it out in communities where it occurs.

Theater owners may disinfect their seats with a chemical that prevents ringworm, known as astrol dihydrochloride. Barber shops must also be kept clean and sanitary.

Once the infection has started, an ointment made with this same substance may clear it up rapidly. The hair should be clipped short during treatment.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

THREE nights after Priscilla's and David's wedding, Old Mrs. Forbes died in her sleep, as she had hoped she would; and it was when she was leaving her grandmother's house to go back to her own, after the funeral, that Emily remembered what Sister Mary Theresa had said—that the chapel at St. Margaret's was always open. She wondered now why she had never thought of it before—how she could have helped thinking of it before. She walked slowly across the Square and went up the steps. As she did so, she noticed, for the first time, the words graven on the arch above the door:

PER AUGUSTA AD AUGUSTA

The portress who answered her ring recognized her, though it was so long since she had visited there. "I'm so glad to see you again, Mrs. Field," she said, in her soft, sweet voice. "You've been very much in our thoughts and in our prayers. You'd like to see Sister Mary Theresa, wouldn't you?"

"Not quite yet. I just want to go up to the chapel, if I may."

"Certainly, Mrs. Field. I think you know the way. Of course I'd be glad to come along. Or would you rather be alone?"

"Yes, I do know the way. And thank you, but I would rather go alone."

She went up to the little chapel and knelt down. She did not try to pray; it was so long since she had really prayed that she knew she could not do so now. But gradually the sense of peace and the awareness of Divinity which had come to her so many years before, in this same place, permeated her being again. She raised her eyes to the crucifix on the altar.

"I have to go along alone," she murmured. "There isn't anyone left to go with me now. Unless you will."

"Nothing is hard all the time; there is always an ebb and flow to trouble, just as there is to the tide."

Emily had heard her grandmother say this dozens of times. Now, when she least expected this, she found out the full force of its truth.

The terrible loneliness which had engulfed her after David's marriage and Old Mrs. Forbes' death lasted a surprisingly short while. Emily realized that this was partly because she was so busy that she had no leisure whatsoever for introspection, and very little for reflection; she believed it was also because she resolutely kept her mind on the manifold tasks which confronted her while she was performing them, and did not permit herself to dwell on personal problems, except in connection with these. The periods that she did give over to deliberation were definitely set apart from her numerous and varied activities: some time in the course of every day, she went to St. Margaret's Chapel, if only for a few minutes; and every night, before she went to bed, she devoted a few minutes more to quiet meditation.

She was conscious of no great resurgence of faith, no groping for doctrinal precepts, not even any special leaning toward religion; she made no attempt to force herself to utter prayers which did not come naturally from her heart to her lips or to study sacred subjects. But almost immediately after her desperate avowal that she had only one possible source of communion left, the conviction that she was wholly alone began to lose its terrors and its strength. It appeared that there were, after all, a number of persons to whom she mattered and who mattered to her; in the preoccupation of her thoughts which were centered on David and in the companionship with her grandmother, she had underestimated the importance of these other persons in her life. Now this became apparent, and it seemed to her that the revelation sprang from the same source to which she had appealed; by asking for Divine sustenance, she had been granted the power to find human sustenance also.

The next time Brian came, she told him something quite different. She could not have said why she wanted to, but the fact remained that she did. She told him how she had gone, not habitually, but frequently, before her marriage and in the period immediately thereafter, to St. Margaret's; and how she had stopped going, at first because of Homer Lathrop's cynicism, and later, because she found that a like cynicism had crept through her own being. Then she told him how she had gone there again, the day of her grandmother's funeral, for no other reason than because she felt entirely alone in the world and because she could think of no other place to go. Brian did not jest with her this time, or ask her inopportune questions. He listened attentively and gravely until she had finished telling him everything there was in her heart to say.

They sat in companionable silence for some moments. Then Emily realized that Brian was not grave any longer, that he was grinning again and that there was a twinkle in his eye which was not without a spark of harmless malice.

"Do you remember that the day you took such exception to my technique as a suitor, I asked you whether you were troubled about the possibility that I might think too much, and you said it really wasn't any affair of yours?"

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, you tempt me to make a similar answer. Why should I be troubled about your religion—unless it is some affair of mine? Why should you think I would be, unless you're ready to admit that it is?"

She rose hastily and walked away from him, conscious of a flaming face. He caught up with her and put his arm around her.

"Sure and it's all right, mavourneen," he said lightly. "And I was a low dog, and all the rest of it, to trip you up like that. But this time, I'm going to have just one wee kiss and nothing you'll say will stop me, either."

She did not see him alone again for some time, partly because her Uncle Russell moved in upon her almost immediately thereafter, and practically took over the house, and partly because she and Brian were both so preoccupied in different directions. Brian won, hands down, in the primaries. The only other contestant for the nomination was an old ward healer whose bosses belonged to a now-discredited political machine; and, as he himself admitted, the cards were stacked against him from the beginning—what could he do against a rising young lawyer, whose own political backing was powerful.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

news behind the news

By RAY TUCKER

Editor's Note: Every Saturday this veteran Washington newspaper correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27—"How do you account for Eisenhower's apparent selection of Senator Taft to be majority leader of the Senate?" asks J. L. of Brooklyn. "Doesn't that corroborate the Stevenson-Truman campaign charge that Ike has become Bob's captive?"

Answer: Quite the contrary, in my opinion, although I may be wrong. But I find that most political and parliamentary experts think this was one of Eisenhower's many shrewd moves since his election as President.

Taft, in effect, becomes the quarterback instead of a bench substitute on the Eisenhower team. In that position, he will help Ike to call the signals and direct the plays. It will be to his interest and ambition to do the best possible job.

Everybody, including his enemies, recognizes that the Ohio senator has the finest mind on Capitol Hill. Nor is he the reactionary his enemies make him out to be.

He is unflinchingly honest; his is the kind of honesty that hurts. So, why wouldn't Ike want him as his top Senatorial adviser, with the able "Joe" Martin holding down that job on the House side?

With Taft and Martin in their roles, and Senators Bridges, Knowland and Millikin backstopping in leadership positions, Eisenhower will have an exceptionally able staff on Capitol Hill.

MacARTHUR'S PLAN — "Do you think that MacArthur had a real and constructive solution for winning or ending the so-called 'police action' in Korea?" inquires Mrs. T. F. of Houston, along with many other readers.

Answer: I would not minimize the Eisenhower-MacArthur conversations on this subject because, after all, they are supposed to be our top military strategists. Sitting in with them was our next Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Moreover, although it is not generally known, Eisenhower

passed on Mac's new ideas to his old friends on the Joint Chiefs of Staff. What the Ike-Mac meeting meant is that our finest military brains are at last concentrating on this question. Unlike Truman, they are not approaching the Korean problem with petty or closed minds.

That is Eisenhower's great virtue. Regardless of politics and personalities, and he can have no love for MacArthur, he is willing and patient enough to listen and take counsel.

WHAT IKE WILL DO—I doubt, however, if MacArthur has a ready-made solution to Korea. France and England, embroiled in Indochina, Malaya, Iran and Egypt, are even more bitter against Mac's original proposals for more intensive and aggressive action, lest it promote global conflict. The useless and needless truce negotiations have permitted the North Koreans and Chinese Communists to dig in too deep.

What Eisenhower will do, and he would have done it without MacArthur's advice, is (1) to train and equip more South Korean units to take over the front, with Americans in reserve and logistics, and (2) ship more modern weapons, especially artillery, tanks and planes, than Truman has given to our forces there.

Ike wants to withdraw at least three American divisions from Korea, if possible. Hard-hitting and frost-bitten veterans, they would be a powerful, mobile unit for reinforcement action wherever necessary.

In effect, both Eisenhower and Dulles, and they needed no MacArthur advice on this problem, want to take the cold war initiative away from Russia.

COLLECTIONS — "Do you see any need for the proposed $1,500,000 Truman library—or for the Roosevelt and Hoover collections of official papers at Hyde Park and Palo Alto?"

Answer: No, O. P. of Pasadena, Calif., I do not. These several libraries are simply expressions of presidential ego. I believe that all these official documents should be deposited in the Archives Building at Washington, which was built for that purpose.

Writing history, and learning the lessons of the last quarter of a century, which included our greatest depression and war, will be a terrific task, also expensive, under this system of personal, political and geographical distribution of basic data.

Gala Mistletoe Ball Is Held Friday In Coliseum

600 Persons Attend Event

Highlighting the many social events of the Christmas season, the Mistletoe Ball was held Friday evening in the Coliseum from 10 p. m. until 2 a. m.

Approximately 300 couples were present for the occasion. Formal attire prevailed, however many preferred semi-formal dress.

Ned Mapes orchestra, under the direction of Russ Van played for the evening.

A large decorated Christmas tree was placed in the lobby of the Coliseum. The hall was decorated in red and green. A false ceiling of streamers was suspended over the dance floor, with large clusters of mistletoe down the center. Colored lights were strung around the dancing area and the band stand was draped with red and green paper.

The Kiwanis sponsored event was under the direction of Jack Heeter, general chairman. He was assisted by Dr. R. W. Samuel, music; H. K. Lanman, finance; Guy Campbell, ticket chairman.

Others serving on the ticket committee were Roscoe Warren, Sterling Poling, C. O. Leist and Ernie Hill.

Paul White was chairman of the advertising committee and he was assisted by Lewis Brevard, Robert Wilson and Richard Morris.

Mr. Heeter extended thanks to all committee members and others in helping to complete arrangements.

Decorations and arrangements were directed by Harold Moats and C. E. Linn, and other members of the committees.

The annual event is held to raise funds for the club's child welfare program, which includes aid to underprivileged children, physically handicapped, vocational guidance and Key clubs.

Funds for the Summer playground program at Ted Lewis Park also received from the Ball.

Many festive parties were given before the dance and during intermission and many out-of-town guests were present for the event.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

In a recent issue of the American Legion magazine appeared a cartoon showing parents standing near a Christmas tree, distressed because their child, about 20 months old, was playing with the empty boxes from which the many expensive toys for him had been emptied.

That youngster was wiser than his parents. He could use his imagination better with the boxes than with the "store" toys.

When our oldest child was about two, he would spend long periods of time daily pushing a few plain blocks over the floor following the parquet patterns. Sometimes he pushed several blocks together end to end with a short one upright on the front for a "choo-choo."

Often small objects or bits of paper on the top of the blocks were passengers or freight.

Seeing his intense interest in trains, we bought him a large, gaudily painted metal train, presenting it to him with joy in our hearts.

He played with this "store" train for about ten minutes and left it in the corner of the room. Purposely his mother and I did not remove the train for about two weeks. During all that time he had never turned to it again but went on creating train-fun with his simple, plain, unpainted blocks.

I should add that we did find, later, some toys on the market that he enjoyed for long stretches of time.

But that toy lasted longest in appeal which enabled him to put most into it with his imagination, especially till the time when he entered school.

As the big array of vividly illustrated books for young children, many of them around folk lore and other fanciful materials, have appeared rapidly only during the past ten or fifteen years, few of these were available for our babies.

But there were school primers and first and second grade school readers then, full of the fanciful, and the illustrated Three Bears, Three Pigs, Peter Rabbit, Just-So Stories and Stevenson's Garden of Verses.

When our children entered school, folk lore had almost disappeared from school books and books to be found in stores. Animals that talk were taboo. But folk lore and fanciful yarns are now available for our many young grandchildren.

EVEN SUCH stories are slowly creeping back into school books. Out of the changes and developments, it has been discovered that the age for fairy tales is not nine or ten as experts used to say, but much earlier, especially during preschool period.

You young mothers know how eagerly the little child from two to five or six listens to stories not hampered with realities, and how soon he starts to spin like ones from his little head. Being appreciative, you often write them down.

Some of you have sent such creations to me and they are choice literature.

It's in the preschool years when we parents can best cultivate the youngster's precious powers of imagination.

Coast Guard Seeks Plane Down In Lake

MILWAUKEE (UP)—Coast Guard boats today resumed the hunt for a twin-engine cargo plane that apparently crashed into Lake Michigan before dawn Wednesday, carrying two Ohio men to death.

The search centered off Wind Point, a promontory north of Racine, after two residents of the area gave tips indicating a plane crashed in that area at the same time the Lockheed Electra was trying to land at Mitchell Field, south of Milwaukee.

Two days of hunting by land, sea and air failed to produce clues. Only boats were used today because operations were centering on a small area. Dragging and sounding techniques were used.

The plane, flying from Columbus, O., to Milwaukee with a load of airplane parts, was last heard from at 2:47 a. m. Wednesday when it asked and received clearance to land at Mitchell Field. Aboard were the pilot, Wilton Lyman 32, of Toledo, and the co-pilot, Robert Taylor, 24, of Marion.

LORETTA YOUNG registers one of her most dramatic screen roles starring with popular Jeff Chandler in "Because of You," also co-starring Alex Nicol and Frances Dee. Miss Young plays the role of an unwitting accomplice in a crime for which she pays the penalty and then builds a new life after falling in love with Jeff Chandler. The drama begins Sunday in Grand theatre.

Sokolsky's These Days

The Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, and the House Committee on Un-American Activities need to push into legislation at the earliest possible moment. One of the most urgent acts is to remove altogether the Statute of Limitations involving espionage.

If an American ever engaged in espionage, he should be liable for punishment whenever the case is provable. There is no reason why spies should be given another chance to spy again.

Our sons may during the next few years die violently in war because our national security is weak. They may die because a Russian spy, like Gubitchev, when caught, is sent back to Russia with all the information in his possession.

It is not that we are generous; it is only that we are incompetent and that those who are functioning have been stupid. Both conditions can be corrected.

The Americans in the United Nations who are betraying their country were found out by the untiring persistence of two young lawyers, Robert Morris and Roy Cohn, supported by the McCarran Committee and Attorney General James McGranery. They were fought by many who now hope to establish credit for their work, and the job could have been wrecked had their stupidity prevailed.

The national security cannot be entrusted to position-pride stuffed-shirts with a habit of covering up the errors of an Administration.

City Solicitor Outlines Details Of Municipal Court

Salary Here Might Be At Least $2,000

Court Official Is Barred From Legal Practice

A judge selected for a municipal court in Circleville would have to be paid at least $2,000 a year, although a portion of the salary would be paid by Pickaway County.

These and other important details relating to a municipal court setup, as provided in Ohio's state code, are pointed out by City Solicitor George Gerhardt.

Gerhardt had been asked to list some of the main points in the law relating to a city court. In doing so, he emphasized the code covers municipal court operations only under a general heading and that individual court setups vary.

Prospects of having a municipal court established here have been discussed pro and con for a long time.

ED WALLACE, Pickaway County state representative, has asked local residents to express their views on the subject, warning that the necessary legislation—if any at this time—would have to be introduced during the first six weeks of the assembly.

Pickaway County Bar Association is studying data compiled by Mayor Ed Amey at the Association's request. The association said it wants to see whether the city court plan appears "financially feasible" for Circleville.

Among the points of law bearing on a city court setup, as outlined by Gerhardt, are the following:

COMPENSATION of judge — In territories having a population of not more than 20,000, judges shall receive as compensation an amount not less than $2,000 per annum, as the legislative authority shall prescribe, and the judge thereof shall be disqualified from the practice of law only as to matters pending or originating in said municipal court during his term of office.

In no case shall the compensation of any municipal judge exceed the statutory compensation of a judge of the court of common pleas in the county in which the municipal court is situated, nor shall compensation of a municipal judge exceed $10,500 except the presiding judge of a municipal court shall receive an additional $500 and the chief justice of a municipal court shall receive an additional $1,000.

The compensation of municipal judges shall be paid in semi-monthly installments, three-fifths of said amount being payable from the city treasury and two-fifths of such amount being payable from the county in which such city is situated.

EFFECT OF institution of courts: transfer of pending proceedings, with records—Upon the institution of a municipal court, the jurisdiction of the mayor and the police justice in all civil and criminal causes shall terminate within the municipality in which such municipal court is located. All other mayors within the territory may retain such jurisdiction as now provided in all criminal causes involving violation of ordinances of their respective municipalities to be exercised concurrently with the municipal court. Upon the institution of a municipal court, the jurisdiction of justices of the peace and police justices in all civil and criminal causes shall terminate in any township or municipality which is entirely within the territory. Upon the institution of a municipal court, the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in all civil and criminal causes shall terminate in that part of any township which is included within the territory.

Upon the institution of a municipal court, all causes, judgments, executions and proceedings then pending in courts of mayors, police justices, and justices of the peace within the territory as to which their jurisdiction is hereby terminated shall proceed in the municipal court as if originally instituted therein.

DEFINITION of term — "Territory" means the geographical areas within which municipal courts have jurisdiction.

QUALIFICATIONS of judge — A municipal judge during his term of office shall be a qualified elector and a resident of the territory of the court to which he is elected or appointed and shall have been admitted to the practice of law in the state and shall have been actively engaged in the practice of law as

Vets Warned On Supreme Court Ruling

James P. Shea, Pickaway County Veterans' service officer, has called attention to a widespread error made in interpreting a U. S. Supreme Court ruling on GI life insurance beneficiaries.

The high court ruled in two cases that GI insurance policies may be paid only to living persons; that is, they can't be paid to the estates of intended beneficiaries.

This, Shea warned, has been twisted in some published accounts to say the court ruled against paying the policies to the estate of the deceased veteran.

At least one of the state-wide veterans publications misinterpreted the decision in its current issue. Cases upon which the ruling was based were filed from Massachusetts and New York, where the beneficiaries died before making claim for the insurance of dead servicemen whose deaths occurred before July 31, 1946.

THE NATION'S highest court held, under law then in effect, that the beneficiary did not have vested right in payment of benefits and that the benefits did not pass to his estate but reverted instead to the estate of the insured veteran.

The National Service Life Insurance act was amended on July 31, 1946, permitting insured servicemen and veterans to designate anyone, including the estate of the insured, as beneficiaries. Therefore, no death cases after July 31, 1946, are affected by the decision.

Shea warned Pickaway County servicemen and veterans to check their policies to make sure beneficiaries are properly designated.

2nd Grandma Bandit Hinted In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP)—There's possibly another grandma bank bandit at large in the Los Angeles area.

The distressing news that two grandmotherly women may have been holding up bank tellers here in recent months, developed Thursday when Grandma No. 1, Mrs. Ethel Arata, 52, arrested Christmas Eve when she tried to rob a bank in nearby Arcadia, could not be identified by one of the tellers.

"She doesn't seem to be the same woman who held me up," said Miss June North of the Union Bank & Trust Co., who was robbed of $2,600 by a gray-haired pistol-packing grandma Nov. 12.

Mrs. Arata has steadfastly denied she robbed the Union Bank. Police say she quickly admitted that she stuck up branches of the California Bank Oct. 17 and the Citizens National Bank, Nov. 26, getting a total of $1,469.

Detectives were inclined to believe Mrs. Arata's story of the two holdups and her denial of the other, but Miss North will see her in a police lineup Monday night, just to make certain.

262 Foreign Tars Given Clearance

NEW YORK (AP)—All of 262 seamen aboard six foreign freighters questioned Thursday under the provisions of the new McCarran act were allowed shore leave.

The new immigration and nationality law has been in effect for two days.

On Wednesday, 271 crew members of the French liner Liberte were denied shore leave because they failed to answer certain questions required by the law. They spent Christmas Day aboard the vessel.

The McCarran act is aimed at preventing subversives from landing on U. S. shores.

his principal occupation for at least five years.

TERM OF judge—All municipal judges, including chief justices, shall be elected for terms of six years.

OFFICE of judge created; number—In each municipal court there shall be one or more judges according to the population of the territory. Each court shall have one judge for every portion of the first 100,000 inhabitants.

British Lads Frown On Job As Paper Boys

U. S. 'Little Merchant' Plan Given Chilly Reception In London

By ROBERT F. S. JONES

LONDON (AP)—In Britain most boys think it is beneath their dignity to earn a few coppers by delivering newspapers.

And it looks like things are going to stay that way, despite a plea by 17 British newsmen that the American system of "little merchant" newsboys might be an idea worth trying.

The suggestion came from a group representing British newspapers of all sizes outside London. After visiting American newspapers under the auspices of the Anglo-American Productivity Council, the group reported: The "little merchant" system "can be a worthy and healthy effort (which) need not interfere with education and can instill in the youngsters the germ of business ability."

In Britain, the man who sells most of the newspapers is the news agent. He keeps a little shop that sells papers, tobacco and cigarettes, candy and a variety of odds and ends.

He gets his newspapers in bulk from wholesalers, splits them up and generally employs several boys on what the British call a newspaper "round" to push them under front doors. The boys get paid a flat rate—which varies according to the news agent—based on the number of customers on their round.

This system has worked so well for over 50 years that the 47,000 news agents scattered through Britain's towns and villages aren't losing much sleep over the suggestion that "little merchants" take over their work.

Albert Whinfrey, general secretary of the News Agents Federation, points out: The distribution of newspapers in Britain is complicated because well over 50 per cent of papers read are "national dailies" published in London and printed here or in large centers in the north.

The papers arrive at distribution centers by train, where they are collected by wholesalers. "Boys couldn't do this—railways wouldn't take kindly to a pack of kids running around," Whinfrey said.

"They might be able to collect papers direct from publishers in the case of local newspapers, but they wouldn't get very far on the profits from that."

A quick denial that the suggestion was intended to cut out the news agent came from William Ridd, secretary of the Newspaper Newsagents Association.

Ridd, a member of the group that visited the U. S., explained the "little merchant" recommendation was made primarily to get parents and education authorities to change their views on the employment of boys in newspaper rounds.

He suggested the "little merchant" idea could be put into practice by news agents themselves, and wrote in the news agents magazine "National News Agents": "Public opinion still regards this part-time occupation as something beneath dignity... detrimental to a boy's physical and mental development and well-being."

"American practice has shown such views to be ill-founded," he wrote. "Despite Ridd's appeal, education authorities probably would step in with a veto if the 'little merchant' idea showed signs of being taken seriously."

Newspaper rounds are frowned upon by these authorities as a regrettable necessity to be kept within strict limits. In general, they have banned it for boys under 12 and for hours earlier than seven in the morning. Some of the higher class schools forbid it entirely.

Plasma Bought By Store Just For 'Publicity'

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Miami Daily News quoted an operator of a veterans surplus store as stating today he bought a supply of blood plasma to get publicity.

The newspaper said William A. Weintraub conceded he bought the plasma "for its unusualness" from the Marine June Co. at Mobile, Ala.

Weintraub previously said he received 43 pints of plasma in a shipment of Army surplus goods from the Army General Depot at Memphis, Tenn.

The story attracted wide attention. The Memphis depot denied any such shipment and said it did not handle plasma. The Defense Department at Washington ordered an investigation.

A Marine colonel was reported flying here to question Weintraub when the store operator told the news it was all a publicity gag.

He said he actually received 21 pints of plasma and 21 pints of distilled water. There still was no explanation of how the plasma got into private hands. Labels indicated it had been donated to the Red Cross.

Ten Ohioans Killed While Out Hunting

COLUMBUS, O. (AP)—The Ohio Division of Wildlife says its records show that 10 Ohio hunters lost their lives during the 1952 hunting seasons, three more than in 1951.

Two hunters, the division's report said, lost their lives as a direct result of firearms during the squirrel season, one while waterfowl hunting and seven during the rabbit and pheasant season.

No fatalities or injuries were reported during the three-day Ohio deer season.

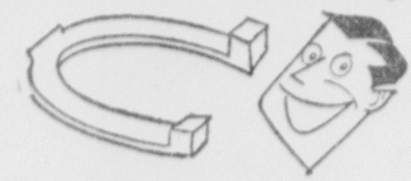

While fatalities showed an increase, a drop was noted in the number of injuries from the same cause during the year.

In 1951, a total of 112 injuries were reported from firearms while hunting. This year there were reports on only 79 persons suffering non-fatal gunshot wounds.

The average age of hunters injured fatally was 24, while the average age of those injured was slightly over 16.

All but one of the fatal accidents were caused by the victims' own gun.

Hybrid Corn Affects Lives Of All Ohioans

Hybrid corn has indirectly affected the life of every Ohio citizen.

Most of the state's production of 175 million bushels per year is converted immediately into meat, milk, and eggs through its use as livestock feed.

In 1920, Buckeye farmers used to harvest an average of 36 bushels per acre from old-fashioned, field pollinated corn. Now many farmers are producing 100 bushels per acre. Hybrid corn has made this increase possible.

Translated into food for the table, it's easy to see how hybrid corn has made a major contribution toward our economic existence. Figuring conservatively, this magic of genetics through farm research is worth $40 million a year to the state.

HYBRIDS ARE the result of many years of basic experimentation in plant breeding. Research workers made thousands of crosses combining the best features of many until they arrived at a high-yielding type that stood up well, matured early and husked easily.

It is estimated at least 25 per cent of the state's corn crop can be credited to hybrids and improved practices developed at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

Latest idea in hybrid breeding is a type that resists heavy damage from birds which invade fields in certain areas. This variety will add further to the state's present bulging crops.

Retailers Set New Records In Yule Trade

National Average Dollar Volume 5 Pct. Above Year Ago

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Retailers in most parts of the country—in first reports coming in today—set new records for Christmas trade.

When final returns are in, dollar volume of gift giving this year may be found to have topped last year's yuletide rush by more than five per cent, on a national average.

A good January is expected, too, as merchants plan for clearance sales and other promotions. The retail trade revival which started last summer is expected to hold over well into 1953.

Total dollar volume of retail trade in the final days before Christmas is estimated by Dun & Bradstreet as ranging from 5 per cent better than a year ago in the east to as high as 13 per cent better in the South and Southwest.

Apparel stores report an unexpected rush of last-minute shoppers, and their gains over a year ago may top those of department stores. Some big city department stores continued to trail, but their branches in the suburbs report good business.

January business may get a boost from the distribution of year-end dividends by corporations and by savings associations.

The United States Savings and Loan League estimates 12 million Americans next week will receive 252 million dollars in year-end dividends from the nation's savings associations and cooperative banks.

Assets of the associations rose 15 per cent this year, the league reports, and now approaches a 22 billion dollar total.

The chain stores and mail order houses, who through most of 1952 were reporting bigger gains in business than were the department stores, are counting on a big after-Christmas shopping spurge.

To tempt the customers, two of the Chicago mail-order houses are out today with midwinter catalogs. Both feature price cuts.

Sears Roebuck's new book offers promotions with prices as much as 50 per cent lower than a year ago. Officials say the average for all lines is a nine per cent reduction.

Alden's spring-summer catalog shows prices averaging 2½ per cent lower than in the fall catalog, and about 5 per cent lower than a year ago.

On another price front the consumer isn't doing as well. For the first time in 11 weeks the Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index has turned upward. It is still, however, well below last year and hovers around the pre-Korean level.

Retail food prices continue high. But the pre-Christmas sales of food set a new record. Consumers apparently had plenty of money to

Ike Hinted Planning Talk About Stalin

NEW YORK (AP)—A typically American merry Christmas behind him, President-elect Eisenhower may interrupt his planned week-end rest to discuss with aides Soviet Premier Stalin's publicized willingness to meet with him.

On his way to yule church services yesterday, Eisenhower was asked by newsmen what he thought about such a meeting.

"I won't have anything to say on that this morning. I assure you," the general replied.

In Washington yesterday, Eisenhower's secretary of state-designate, John Foster Dulles, said he has "nothing to say" until he talks with his chief. Dulles added he planned to return to New York today.

In replying to four written questions from the New York Times, Stalin also said he is "interested in ending the war in Korea" and does not consider an East-West conflict inevitable.

Eisenhower spent the holiday with his family, opening packages beside the big Christmas tree, eating a turkey dinner, and playing with his three grandchildren—David, 4, Barbara, 2, and Susan, 11 months. The Eisenhower's son, John, is a major in Korea.

With Eisenhower and his wife, Mamie, throughout the day were the general's mother-in-law, Mrs. Elvira Doud, and their daughter-in-law Mrs. John Eisenhower.
